EXAMINE MRS. EDDY AT HOME

Aged Science Leader Opens Doors of Pleasant View to Masters.

"NEXT FRIENDS" BARRED

By Long-Distance Telephone to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 14.—The doors of Pleasant View are opened this afternoon and the three masters who are sitting here to determine the question of Mrs. Eddy's competency to manage her own affairs will spend several hours at the home of the aged head of Christian Science.

They will examine Mrs. Eddy at length, and both the attorneys for the next friends and the attorneys for the defendants concede that the most important developments in the case so far hinge upon the result of the examination this afternoon at Pleasant View.

Judge Aldrich, Dr. Jelly and H. W. Parker, the three Masters, will be accompanied to Mrs. Eddy's home by Frank S. Streeter, Mrs. Eddy's personal counsel, and former United States Senator William E. Chandler, chief counsel for the next friends.

Bars Religious Issue.

A court stenographer will complete the party. He will make shorthand notes of every word that is uttered at the examination this afternoon. Whether any or all of his notes will be made public has not yet been decided.

Just before Judge Aldrich announced in court to-day that he and his co-master would go to see Mrs. Eddy, he commented upon those portions of Senator Chandler's argument in which the Senator had attacked Christian Science.

"This inquiry," Judge Aldrich said, "is not for the purpose of disestablishing Christian Science. So far as is possible the question of religion should be disassociated from this inquiry. In this case it makes no difference whether the alleged delusions are delusions as to religion or politics."

Denies Chandler's Request.

The announcement of the visit to Pleasant View was made after Senator Chandler had asked that he and the next friends and several other persons to be selected by him be permitted to accompany the masters.

"We think," said Judge Aldrich, "that the presence of the next friends would be prejudicial rather than otherwise and not for that reason they will not be permitted to go."

The announcement of the composition of the visiting party was then made.

As soon as the three masters in the Eddy case opened to-day's session of the hearing former United States Senator Chandler arose and submitted his proposition covering a visit to Pleasant View.

"I will consent to examine Mrs. Eddy at her home rather than in this court room," he said, "if I am permitted to take seven persons with me, to call at Pleasant View at least five times during one day, at times not known in advance at Pleasant View, and to see Mrs. Eddy and talk to her without the presence of any member of her immediate household."

General Frank S. Streeter, leading counsel for Mrs. Eddy, has based his objection to the appearance of his client in court to-day upon the alleged debasing attributed to her by the "Next Friends," but upon her frail physical condition.

Scope Not Defined.

When the announcement of Judge Aldrich was made, General Streeter took occasion to urge that the visit of the masters be made as early as possible, suggesting 2 o'clock this afternoon as agreeable to his client and counsel.

The scope of the hearing has not yet been fully defined, but it is evident that the masters will admit testimony as to Mrs. Eddy's condition for some time previous to the inception of the suit, in June, 5. The scope will not be fully decided until after the masters have paid their visit to Mrs. Eddy.

To Attack Religion.

Although on previous occasions when Mr. Chandler has appeared in the Eddy case he has repeatedly disclaimed any intention of attacking Christian Science, the recorded words of his address yesterday and to-day show that he intends to try to prove to the masters that Mrs. Eddy's beliefs, which she has taught for years and which she is still teaching, constitute mental incompetency.

Mr. Chandler advanced two other reasons on which he asked the masters to find Mrs. Eddy incompetent. One was the fact that on March 6, five days after the suit to equity had been filed, Mrs. Eddy created her deed of trust by which her property was placed in the hands of three trustees, to be administered for her benefit. Mr. Chandler said this action proved conclusively the wisdom of the suit that had been brought, for it showed a realization on the part of Mrs. Eddy's friends of the necessity of putting her business affairs out of her hands.

The second reason was, he alleged, that she had for some years avoided the payment of the proper amount of taxes to the city of Concord. Mr. Chandler laid much stress upon the alleged fact that Mrs. Eddy has evaded taxation during the past seven years in the city of Concord. He pointed out that her estate had gradually grown during this time until it now amounts to nearly a million dollars.

Wife of Worcester Millionaire Missing,

FEAR BRIDE KIDNAPPED

Frederick K. Snow Searching New York for Beautiful Girl Strangely Missing.

By Long-Distance Telephone to the Boston American.

SOUTHBRIDGE, Aug. 14.—Fearing that she is a victim of one of the murderers who have been terrorizing New York, or that she has been abducted by her friends who objected to her marriage to him, Frederick K. Snow, son of a wealthy manufacturer of fine tools of this place, has asked the New York police to aid him in finding his bride of two weeks or her body.

Mrs. Snow was pretty Mabel Sullivan, twenty-two years old, daughter of a prominent real estate man of Southbridge.

Two weeks ago, when it became known that she and Mr. Snow had been married and had left for New York, society was astounded. They knew that Mr. Snow and Miss Sullivan were friends, but that they loved each other not even their parents knew.

In New York Mr. and Mrs. Snow rented rooms at No. 221 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street.

Bostonians called Mr. Snow to Newark, N. J., last Monday afternoon.

Urges Him to Hurry Home.

"Hurry home, dear, because I will be very lonesome without you," she said to her husband as she kissed him goodby.

He returned to his New York home at 10 o'clock that night and she was gone. But she had taken none of her baggage.

Went to Walk in Park.

Other occupants of the East One Hundred and twenty-fourth street house say that they saw her leave her rooms and start for Mount Morris park where she said she would walk for an hour or two.

Many women have been attacked in this park since the wave of crime began in New York.

The police have established positively that Mrs. Snow went to the park, but they have not been able to find anyone who saw her after she entered one of the shaded walks.

Followed by Man.

The police are trying to locate a man who Mr. Snow says followed his wife one afternoon last week to her home.

"If I drove the fellow off," Mr. Snow told the New York police, according to information received here from him, "and I am sure he would have shown fight but for the presence of some policemen in the neighborhood."

When Mrs. Snow disappeared she had on hat. She wore a light shirtwaist and a duck skirt.

None of the clothing in her three trunks had been disturbed. None of her hats were gone. Even her jewelry, except for the engagement and wedding rings and gold bracelet, were in her room.

Jewelry Undisturbed.

Had she intended to leave her husband the police believe that she would have taken all of her clothing and jewelry with her. Those who had met the couple since they came to New York said that Mrs. Snow seemed greatly attached to her husband and was with him most of the time.

Mrs. Snow has a mass of fluffy blonde hair, great blue eyes and a well-rounded figure. She is about five feet eight inches in height and weighs about 148 pounds.

The bride of Mrs. Snow here deny that she was abducted by any members of her family.

They fear that she has met with an accident or foul play and, probably to-day some of her relatives will leave for New York to assist her husband and the police in their investigation of her disappearance.

CITY LABORERS NOW THREATEN TO STRIKE

Two hundred and fifty city laborers of Newton, formerly Local No. 12,280 of the City Employes' Union, are on the verge of a strike, the large amount of highway improvement now in progress throughout the city is threatened with delay, and all because the demands of the men for a minimum wage rate of $2 per day have been denied. The executive committee of the union gave out notices to the effect that its efforts to procure a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulty had failed and that a meeting would be held Friday evening, at which final action in the matter would be taken.

The present wage rate in Newton is $1.75 a day.

60,000 RAILROAD OPERATORS BACK UP THE STRIKERS

Assurance To-day by President of the Organization That Commercial Telegraphers Will Have Its Support—Action of Boston & Maine May Force Railway Men Out Here.

Officials of the local Telegraphers' Union were informed to-day that operators of the Boston & Maine, under orders from the company, were being compelled to handle commercial messages.

This fact, it is believed, will precipitate a strike on the part of the Order of Railway Telegraphers. Belonging to this organization are about 60,000 operators and they have more than a million dollars in their treasury.

In connection with this action of the railway telegraphers, Joseph F. Ahern, president of the New York local union, made this statement to-day:

RAILWAY MEN ANXIOUS.

"President Small has wired me to-day that he has received unqualified assurance from Mr. Perham, grand master of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, that their union will give us their heartiest moral and financial support, and that their men will absolutely refuse to handle any commercial messages for the Western Union or Postal."

This order was sent to the agents of the Boston & Maine company to-day:

RAILROAD TELEGRAM.

BOSTON & MAINE.

August 13, 1907.

To Agents—Our messages for Birmingham, Ala.; Mattiesburgh, Miss.; Kansas City, Salt Lake City, Helena, Omaha, El Paso, Dallas and Fort Worth should be accepted subject to indefinite delay.

(Signed) S. A. D. FORRISTALL, Supt.

The strikers in Boston have opened headquarters at No. 1104 Washington street. James J. McGarty, president of the Boston local, was in charge there to-day. President McGarty declared that the union was perfectly familiar with the situation. He declared that the country "is completely tied up, reports from the telegraph officials to the contrary notwithstanding." Many of the striking operators prepared to-day to go on an excursion to Hough's Neck, it is free.

STATE STREET AFFECTED.

The effect of the strike was felt to-day on State street. Few of the members of the Chamber of Commerce appeared in their offices. At the Fruit and Produce Exchange business was practically suspended. The Postal office, at No. 26 North Market street, which it was announced yesterday would remain open, was closed to-day.

C. A. Richardson, manager of the Postal office, said to-day that their trunk lines were working and the major part of their local lines. They are accepting messages, however, he said, subject to delay.

On the Boston Stock Exchange to-day the brokers used telephones instead of telegraph wires.

AWAIT SMALL'S ORDER.

A teased wire dispatch from Chicago to the BOSTON AMERICAN says that President D. J. Keefe of the Longshoremen's Union, left there to-day and is believed to be on his way east on a secret mission from the striking operators to President Bidwell, President Keefe's commission strengthens the belief that the operators depend upon the Presidents to prevent a prolongation of hostilities.

Frank P. Sargent, president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, reached Chicago to-day, and steps were taken immediately afer he conferred with other officials of the organization to send out a general strike order.

This official action of the executive board of the national union will not only give out the news to the men who have gone out, but will serve to make the tieup more complete throughout the whole country.

Even many smaller towns and cities where no men were waiting for the general strike order came word to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day that they had or were preparing to quit their keys.

RAILWAY MEN AWAIT WORD.

Attempts of the telegraph companies to send commercial messages by non-union operators have brought this large and wealthy organization to the verge of going out. The railroad telegraph operators are in hearty sympathy with the men on strike, and they have almost caught the "fever."

From Chicago comes a call from the business men to President Roosevelt to take a hand in trying to settle the great battle that threatens the business interests of the country.

The strike extended to New England to-

CITY OFFICIALS IN PANIC OVER INDICTMENTS

Friend of Superintendent Doyle Questions Grand Jury Witnesses to Ascertain What Has Happened.

Three secret indictments were returned at 12:15 o'clock to-day in the Loan bill bribery inquiry by the grand jury. Judge Schofield took the papers and service will be made at once.

The city administration is in a panic over reports which have reached its members that a prominent city official and several Councilmen have been indicted by the Grand Jury which has been investigating the passage of the $1,599,500 loan bill by the Common Council on July 8.

Late last night, when they had received what they believed to be confirmation of the indictments, Mayor Fitzgerald, James H. Doyle, superintendent of streets; former Assistant District Attorney Joseph A. Dennison and Timothy W. Coakley hastily got together and had a conference at Young's Hotel.

They were in session until long after midnight trying to devise ways and means to upset what they believed to be the finding of the grand jury, as was nearly done when Representative Gethro was indicted for bribery last year in connection with state legislation.

Mayor at Conference.

Information that certain city officials had been indicted came to Mayor Fitzgerald early last night, and soon after he got the information he and Doyle, Coakley and Dennison met.

The Mayor, Coakley, Dennison and Doyle not only discussed the indictments they had heard about, but they discussed action they had heard had been taken against certain of the Fitzgerald machine men who were seen in the corridors at City Hall the night the loan bill was passed and voted for it.

The Grand Jury resumed its deliberations to-day, and heard a number of witnesses.

A close friend of Superintendent of Streets Doyle was in the corridors outside the jury room, and stopped nearly every witness as he came out.

"What's happened? Has Doyle been indicted? What are they doing now?" he asked nearly every witness.

Gave Little Satisfaction.

The witnesses gave him little satisfaction, but he stuck to his job until the jury adjourned for lunch.

The Mayor and his friends blame C. T. Harding, a Republican councilman from Ward 20, for the probing which has been done by the Grand Jury.

Harding is alleged to have told Councilman Pierce, who is the Republican leader from Ward 11, that he had been promised by a certain city official that if he would vote for the loan bill streets in Ward 20 would be fixed up and that he would receive financial aid in his fall campaign.

Pierce and Harding were both before the Grand Jury. Both of them had voted against the passage of the loan bill.

The Mayor and his administration friends, Doyle, Coakley and Dennison have been trying to squelch indictments charging attempt at bribery and perjury.

Former Assistant District Attorney Dennison and Mr. Coakley are the men the Fitzgerald administration has been relying on more than any others to "kill" any indictments which the Grand Jury might find against any of their members.

Mr. Dennison, Henry and Judge Corbett of the Charlestown District Court, a shrewd Fitzgerald supporter, were dashing frantically about the city this morning in the Mayor's auto.

They visited the offices of a number of prominent business men, had a number of conferences with men who have been high in the Fitzgerald political circles.

SET FIRE IN WHICH 5 DIED

BOULDER, Col., Aug. 14.—John W. Reeves, employe of the Colorado & Northwestern Railroad, who has been held as a suspect in connection with the destruction of the Colorado & Southern station by fire and dynamite early Saturday morning, to-day confessed that he was responsible for the crime. Later Frank Kiser, another suspect, also confessed.

The result of their act was the wiping out of five lives and the injury of a half hundred others, besides the destruction of property valued at half a million dollars.

day. About all of the union operators in the Lynn district walked out. This district comprises Lynn, Salem, Newburyport, Manchester, N. H., Concord, N. H., Portsmouth, N. H., and all of the Maine cities with the exception of Portland, which has a union of its own.

GIRLS STRIKE-BREAKERS.

The companies in Boston are using girls as strike-breakers. Girls who had been employed as operators and had quit because of marriage or other reasons, students who were home ahead of regular time, another low society were gathered up and whirled in automobiles to the companies' offices.

It is possible that the telegraphers who work in brokers' offices may be called out in this city. A meeting of the State street chapel of the union has been called for Friday evening when this matter will be taken up.

A young operator, who gave his name as Harry Fuller, and who had been working for many hours straight at a strike-breaking job, joined the strikers here to-day.

As a result of the tieup of the telegraphers the fish business in Boston is practically at a standstill. They cannot communicate with New York and the price of fish has dropped 50 per cent.

The weather forecast was held up to-day because of the strike.

MEANS GREAT WAR.

A strike of the railway telegraphers would precipitate one of the greatest labor struggles in the history of the country.

Every railway system would be paralyzed and other labor organizations allied to the railway telegraphers might readily be drawn into the conflict.

It is admitted by railway men in control yesterday that the danger of such a crisis is most acute. Almost in whispers they speak of the grave possibilities involved.

So delicate is the situation, they admit, that to avert such a crisis it must be handled with the uppermost care.

When railroad men learned last night that five railroad telegraphers had been discharged by the Erie Railroad for refusing to handle telegrams for Gould, the news was received with alarm. It was feared that this action would precipitate the struggle which all concerned have been trying to avert.

Not only were the possibilities of trouble realized by the officers of the New York Central and of the B. & O. roads, but it was day that when railroad telegraphers in their employ refused to handle the telegraph companies the issue was not forced.

With a membership of more than 40,000, the Order of Railway Telegraphers has a surplus in its treasury of $60,000, according to the last report, standing in this respect third among the labor organizations of the entire country. The organization is said to be particularly rich in the operators connected with railroad work, highly organized from coast to coast and within the control of the national officers.

Wesley Russell, general secretary of the national organization of telegraphers, has issued an order calling out every man in the big cities. The carrying out of this will completely cripple the commercial service.

The situation in Chicago is particularly grave. Advices from there say that the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroads are handling commercial messages and the men may go out any minute.

RAILWAY MEN CONFER.

Frank J. Ryan, head of the New York Local Order of Railway Telegraphers, and Thomas M. Pierson, second vice-president of the national body of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, held a conference in New York yesterday, and it has been definitely announced that if the railways did not abide by their agreements a strike would have to follow.

BOSTON MESSENGER BOYS, WHO STRIKE IN SYMPATHY WITH TELEGRAPHERS

BOSTON STRIKERS PREDICT VICTORY

With Boston one of the storm centres in the great strike of the Commercial Telegraphers which has now spread from ocean to ocean, headquarters of the strikers in Commercial Hall, No. 694 Washington street, were early to-day the scene of activity. President James J. McGarty and Secretary Haggerty were early at their desks.

All morning long the officials of Local No. 4, the Boston local of the Commercial Telegraphers, were busy receiving reports from the conditions in the large cities and occasionally reports from other parts of the country.

Many of the odd striking telegraphers dropped into the rooms still during the morning to consult with their leaders and to get how the struggle was going. On the faces of one and all was a look of determination and confidence.

Report Complete Tieup.

Statements issued by the local officials early in the day indicated their entire satisfaction in the way affairs were going. Their very manner plainly showed that they envied victory. They declared that the telegraphers in Boston had responded nobly to the strike order and that the Western Union and the Postal were both tied up tight.

At both the offices of the Postal Telegraph and Western Union men were working at the keys, but the appearance of both places claimed that their companies were doing business.

C. A. Richardson, manager of the Postal Telegraph Company at this city, made statement to-day:

"We are accepting messages to-day at all our offices in Boston subject to delay. This morning at 8:30 our force of about thirty-eight operators at work in our main office on State street was increased several more to come in from the suburbs later. We do not anticipate any trouble. All our trunk lines are working as well as the major part of our local ones."

Some Stick to Keys.

According to Mr. Richardson, 125 of the main Postal office operators are on strike and forty-five remain at work.

James J. McGarty, president of the Boston local, Commercial Telegraphers, said to-day in a statement to a BOSTON AMERICAN representative:

"The country is completely tied up, reports from the telegraph officials to the contrary notwithstanding.

"As an evidence of this, we have mercly to point to the petition which was sent yesterday to President Roosevelt by the Board of Trade of Chicago, requesting him to intervene, and compare it with the statement given out by the telegraph officials of Chicago, which would make it appear that they are in a position to do business.

At Least 600 Are Out.

"There is a possibility that the strike may extend to the railroads unless the strike order would come from President Perham of the O. R. T. at St. Louis. It would be received by the heads of the various divisions.

"I should say that in the Boston district there are 800 men and women on strike. Of those who did not join us the great majority may be classed as amateurs."

Realizing that without telegraph operators they can do but little business, many members of the Chamber of Commerce today failed to show up at their offices. Most of them remained at their country homes, where it is said they will stay until the strike is settled. At the Postal telegraph office at the Chamber of Commerce is closed and at the Western Union offices open with Operator Malloy in charge. Malloy is sending a few messages but is not receiving any.

Fruit Wires Stilled.

At the Fruit and Produce Exchange business is practically suspended to-day.

The Postal telegraph office at No. 26 North Market street, which it was announced yesterday would remain open, was closed this morning.

At the offices of the Postal Telegraph Company and the Western Union all messages, except those being taken "subject to delay." The messenger boys' strike has crippled the Postal Telegraph Company evidently.

Brokers Troubled.

At the Stock Exchange everything to-day is in a bad condition and messages were being received but dimly. The brokers are hard pushed to transact their business, and their work is hard to be made doubly hard to-day.

Two hundred of the striking women telegraphers left Boston to-day for an outing at Hudson's Beach. They loaded aboard by boat and electric cars and were radiant in their anticipation of a long day free from care and beyond the ceaseless clicking of the telegraph instruments.

In Northern New England conditions are better than they are in Boston and other parts of the country, for the offices there have not been affected so seriously. Independent telegraph companies, which are not struck against by the operators, are still able to do business.

Although both the rival companies claim to have enough of their force left to transact business, it is known that the strong-arm methods, even to the closing of some of the smaller offices throughout New England, are to-day being adopted to increase the staff of operators at the Boston offices.

Postal Boys on Strike.

The Postal Telegraph Company is also affected by a strike of 100 messenger boys, who, yesterday, went out after a demand for $5 a week and an eight hour day. The messenger boys are on strike at Boston and at all the branch offices.

The moral and financial aid of the Central Labor Union has been accorded the telegraphers in their fight and other union organizations in Boston are standing ready to help, if necessary.

The Boston Produce Exchange and the Chamber of Commerce are seriously affected by the strike, the entire force in both having obeyed the order to leave the keys.

Cable service is practically tied up, the operators at the cable offices receiving the messages from abroad, but refusing to transmit them to newspaper operators in Boston or to other points throughout the country.

OFFICIALS REFUSE ARBITRATION WITH MEN NOW STRIKING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—With the strike of the telegraph operators becoming more widespread every hour, the Western Union and Postal officials declared there is nothing to arbitrate when the State Board of Labor representatives offered their services.

This was after M. J. Regan of the State Board had visited the headquarters of the striking operators and obtained the word of the leaders that they were willing at any time to abide by the decision of the president or persons selected to hear their grievances and the reply of the company.

Government Affected.

Even the government is affected by the strike. Although there are three Postal wires from Oyster Bay and one Western Union wire to the White House, business was disturbed to-day when the Western Union is silent. When the operators use the other wires they are interrupted by operators between Oyster Bay and Washington cutting in and calling "send," thus tying up the wire to the men sending and receiving. Business was continued under these difficulties.

Great fear exists among railroad men that the strike may be carried into the railroad business through a walkout of the telegraph operators of the railroads. The roads in many cases have agreements to transmit Western Union and Postal business. The operators say if they are ordered to handle commercial messages they will walk out.

A strike was narrowly averted among the operators on the New York Central and Baltimore & Ohio due to this very complication, a meeting has been called in Washington for Monday next to discuss the attitude of the Railway Telegraphers.

Press Associations Crippled.

The Associated Press and nearly all the other news services were not giving their usual service last night. Nearly all day the press service in New York was normal, but last night, because of the failure to reach points outside it was merely a shadow of what it generally is. The Boston service was unintelligible from Coast to Coast.

Operators who worked for the Associated Press yesterday said they did so under protest and declared that they would not be more than one operator at work in New York to-day.

Deputy President Thomas of the telegraphers has issued a statement telling of the gains made in other cities during the past few days, adding that more will be expected to have all the relay offices and principal towns under the ban by Friday night. Mr. Thomas also replied to the refusal of the companies to arbitrate.

A touch of comedy was added to the situation when the messenger boys who have various companies struck in sympathy with the operators. They said they did not much work to do carrying local messages that the company would not send, as the greater part of Hoboken, Jersey City, Brooklyn and nearby places depended upon the strike for news and joined their comrades in a sympathetic strike.

WIRE CHIEFS OUT WITH OPERATORS, SAYS COMMITTEE

The strike committee of the Boston local of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union gave out the following statement to-day from headquarters in Room No. 7 State street:

"The official bulletin from Chicago says that everything is blocked up tight throughout the entire country. It tells the men strikers to stand firm and not to return to work except on the terms agreed upon by President Small.

"In spite of the claim of the Western Union that none of their wire chiefs went out on strike, we wish to say that every chief struck except one, and his name is George Cunningham."

PROVIDENCE WANTS WOMEN TO TAKE THE PLACE OF STRIKERS

By Long Distance Telephone to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 14.—With managers forced to take their tricks at the keys and clerks compelled to assist in the dispatch of business, to-day finds both the Postal and Western Union service practically demoralized. Women operators are being sought as strike-breakers, but the response so far has been disheartening. Broker offices, which are a big factor in the ranks of the strikers some time to-day.

President Harry Murphy called by local union made a stirring address to the strikers last night, the cause of which is that the strike would be of short duration and did in a victory for the union operators.

WOMAN APPEARS AT NEWPORT AS STRIKE-BREAKER

By Long Distance Telephone to the Boston American.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 14.—A women strike-breaker arrived from Boston to-day and went to work in the office of the Western Union Telegraph Company. She arrived rather early. The manager and his wife are the only ones on duty.

At the Postal office Superintendent Foot and his wife and his Jamestown operator, a woman, are working.

Many persons, thinking there is no telegraph service, are coming to Newport. The cottage colony, who are the chief patrons of both companies, and whose telegrams are mostly social, is not seriously inconvenienced. Business, however, is accepted subject to delay.

FISH BUSINESS AT STANDSTILL AS RESULT OF STRIKE

As a result of the total shutting down of the telegraph offices at the T wharf fish wharf, the fish business in Boston is practically at a standstill.

The early days of the week are usually the busiest in the placing of orders for New York. The fish must be sent to New York by the morning boats Monday and to-day there is but one wire running to New York, between Boston and Providence, the Western Union office is at the key and the Postal wire.

At this time of the week the Postal office at the head of T wharf usually has ten operators busily at work. This morning there was none. None but clerks and bookkeepers are in the office and not a wire is working.

The wholesale dealers are preparing to send back to Gloucester whole loads to be salted. Several of the schooners arriving yesterday have made no effort to land their fare.

The price of fish has decreased 50 per cent. Haddock, usually bringing from $2.50 a hundredweight, has dropped to $1.25 to $1.50. Cod is bringing from $1.25 to $1.50, instead of from $2.50 to $3.

VETERAN OF KEYS INTENDS TO STICK TO BROOKLINE POST

Of the two telegraph operators in Brookline, David Connell, who has operated there twenty-five years for the Western Union company, is a non-union man, and declared this morning that he would not strike. The other, James Murphy, who has been for the Postal Telegraph company, stated that he would strike, although not a member of the union. He stated that he had applied for membership in the union, but his application had not yet been acted upon.

BROKERS' OPERATORS WILL VOTE ON ACTION NEXT FRIDAY NIGHT

James R. McLean, chairman of the State street chapel of the telegraphers' union, which includes all the operators who work in the brokerage offices, about 100 men, said to-day:

"After the meeting of the main body of telegraphers last night, the matter of calling out the operators in the brokers' offices was left entirely with the State street chapel.

"I have called a meeting of the members of the chapel for Friday evening at 7 o'clock, in Rathburn Hall, No. 694 Washington street. I have placed the meeting night quite a long way off because I desired to have every member present. We are on our men are in the outlying districts and I desire a full attendance.

"So far as the brokers' offices are concerned everything will run along as usual until the meeting Friday night determines the course we are to pursue. There will be no cessation of work prior to that meeting, and as a matter of fact I do not anticipate that there will be any trouble after the meeting has been held."

AUTOMOBILES TAKE GIRLS TO FILL THE STRIKERS' PLACES

Twenty-five young women were taken to the main offices of the Western Union in Boston to-day in automobiles, carriages and hansom cabs to-day.

They were picked up at the North and the South Stations upon their arrival from their suburban homes and at the company's expense were carried across the city in top style to replace the strikers. Most of them were operators who were at work yesterday.

Superintendent Ames said that he had fifty-four operators at work at the commencement of business to-day.

"There are 125 operators out from this office," he said, "and 55 from outside offices. We have our trunk lines working all right to-day, but the outside lines are not doing so well.

"I give the strikers until front time to give up. This is going to be a hard Winter, and I expect most of the operators to see the point and to come back and ask for their jobs."

ATLANTIC COMPANY WIRES RESORTED TO ABOUT NEW ENGLAND

The Atlantic Telegraph Company, one of the pioneer organizations in the telegraph business, which was organized years ago and has maintained a separate corporate existence from the Western Union and the Postal, is not affected by the present strike of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union.

It has several lines running from Boston into the north of New England, to Portland and other Maine towns and cities. Several of the striking telegraphers were promptly given positions at the Boston office of the Atlantic at No. 63 Hanover street when they left their keys in the Western Union and Postal offices. Others of the strikers are likely to be given positions at different northern New England offices of the Atlantic.

LEASED WIRES AND PHONES RESORTED TO BY BIG BROKERS

At the Stock Exchange to-day in State street the drop in stocks, which has been the pronounced feature of the stock market for several days past, continued, but there was a noticeable easing of the tension.

John Rood, superintendent of the wire division at the exchange, said a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"Both the Western Union and the Postal telegraph operators are gone and the offices here are closed. We are crowding our wires with our own special leased wires. Most of the work formerly done by the Postal and Western Union is being accomplished by means of the long-distance telephone."

WOMEN BIG FACTOR IN TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE

They Stand Ready to Fight Companies to Finish for Their Rights.

By Eleanor Ames.

Every important movement in the modern world, whether business or social, has a woman's side.

Woman is neither dominant nor rampant, but she is important.

She may not rule but she cannot be left out of the reckoning.

It is so with the present telegraphers' strike.

When the whistle sounded in Boston, women as well as men obeyed the call to "go out."

Fully half a hundred of the striking telegraphers in Boston to-day are women. Most of them were present at the meeting held last night in Pilgrim Hall. Some of them spoke, calmly, decidedly and intelligently. All listened attentively, sympathetically and intelligently.

The telegraphic service of Boston, and in fact of the entire country, are intelligent. If they were not they would not be telegraphers, for it takes more than average eye and hand and instrument clicks which is so fascinatingly meaning to the layman, and write out the translation in creditable English on the typewriter. If it takes average intelligence to become a typewriter, it takes twice as much to become a telegrapher, for it is virtually doing two things at once, listening with the ear, translating with the brain and transcribing with the fingers.

Nearly all of the fifty Boston women strikers were present at last night's meeting. Others had come and gone during the evening and their enthusiasm, like most applauded them affectionately as they entered the hall in groups of three or four or half a dozen.

They Are Not Frivolous.

There is nothing frivolous or aggressive in the demands of business life, knowing the value of their place, willing to work and industrious, they demand adequate compensation for their labor.

Many of them are quite young, ranging from eighteen to twenty-five, fresh, happy-hearted girls, with a balance and reserve which comes of rubbing shoulders with the world.

Some of them are mature women of thirty or thirty-five. A few of them are married. One has a husband among the strikers.

"Why are we striking?" they said. "For what we think are our just deserts. To begin with, we think that as long as we hold as important positions as the men, do the same work as the men, work as long hours as the men, we should be paid as much as the men. We are not now.

Long Hours, Small Pay.

"When we are considered experienced operators, we get from $12 to $15 and in a few rare instances $14 a week. For this we work nine hours a day and most of us furnish our own machines.

"To earn that much we have to know two trades. We have to be expert telegraphers and expert typewriters. Telegraphy is not an easy thing to learn. It takes intelligence and quickness of thought.

"I've never known a stupid girl who ever made a telegrapher," chimed in a listener.

"I do," the others agreed.

"Then," went on the first speaker, "we have to have more than an average education. We have to know more than the English language and we have to possess a variety of tact.

"We think we should be paid from $15 to $18 and have a working day of eight hours and have our machines furnished. Does that seem exorbitant?

"I am considered an expert operator. I am unusually quick and accurate, both in sending and receiving. I have been trusted with most important work. I have literally given the best ten years of my life to my work and I am paid $15 a week for fifty-four hours of hard, constant work. Do you blame me for trying to better my lot and help the others to better theirs, for I'm only one of many?"

2,000 Women Telegraphers.

It is estimated throughout the country there are in the neighborhood of 2,000 women telegraphers who share this woman's views. Many of them have learned their profession by deprivation and hard work.

A few have others dependent upon them for support, mothers or younger sisters, who look to them for food and clothes.

When you realize that $5 is the average wage and $6 and $7 are exorbitant wages for the unrailed domestic worker, who is practically in addition a foundling, it does not seem that these women are asking excessive demands.

So far the women have been content with their affiliation with the general organization without forming any auxiliary or choosing any leader to stand, as President McGarty for a leadership and careful protection, which he is giving with many skills.

Incidental to last night's mass meeting and adding interest were the striking messenger boys, about 75 in all, who were ably represented. As one of their number explained it, "We want $1 a day and less's hours."

POLICE SEARCH BOSTON FOR ALLEGED TERRORIST

ALEXAN ARZOOIAN, LEADER OF ARMENIAN SOCIETY, BELIEVED TO BE THERE.

Chief of Detectives William B. Watts has ordered his men to search every nook and corner of Greater Boston for Alexan Arzooian, the alleged head of the Armenian blacklist Society which has been responsible for many murders in the United States.

Arzooian is being sought for complicity in the killing of Tavshanjian, the wealthy New York rug merchant who was shot down in that city by an agent of the Hunchaklists. He is said to have ordered the murder of Tavshanjian and to have been responsible for the sending of the death threats to Moses Gulesian, a Boston millionaire.

Believe He Is Here.

Immediately after the murder of Tavshanjian in New York Arzooian is said to have journeyed to Montreal, and when the police got on his trail in that city he came to Boston. It is believed to be by the order of one of the many members of the Armenian murder society who live in Greater Boston.

The police have been told that Arzooian has been within the city for the last three days.

Chief Watts is confident that his men will capture the much-wanted Armenian and if they do he will be hailed as the New York authorities to be tried with the other of the Hunchaklists.

Circulars bearing a complete description and photograph of Arzooian were sent out by Chief Watts and he has requested the chiefs of police in the various cities to be on the lookout for Arzooian.

"We mean to catch Arzooian," declared Chief Watts to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter this morning. "The murder society, which has terrorized all the respectable Armenians in this country and Canada, will have to go out of existence. Arzooian is the head of the society, believed by his followers I am satisfied would flee the country if they were arrested.

Aiding the police in their hunt for Arzooian is a man who knows him intimately and who several years ago was a leading one of the band of which Arzooian is the head.

DR. MERRILL HOME ON VISIT

Among the passengers who arrived in Boston to-day on the Leyland liner Bohemian was the Rev. Dr. Selah Merrill, D.D., L.L.D., well known to many Americans who have visited Jerusalem during the last sixteen years. Dr. Merrill has been the United States consul there during that time.

"Social life in Jerusalem is nil," he said to-day. "Unless one has a real purpose in being there he finds it very dull. Still there is truth in the saying that 'If you want to see the great of the earth sit in the Jaffa gate.' Every season a host of Jerusalem has many distinguished visitors each year."

Dr. Merrill, whose old home is in Andover, has been promoted to a consulate in Germany, and after a visit here will go to his new post.

Other passengers were the Rev. Dr. J. L. Ewell, the historian, H. M. Blackstone, Miss M. J. McKee and Mrs. C. F. White of Boston and J. Rose-Troup of Cambridge.

PROFESSOR SANFORD DYING.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Professor Ramsel Sanford, head of the department of music at Yale, is reported dying, according to a dispatch from London.

HUNT DIAMOND SMUGGLERS

Uncle Sam's men in Boston are hot on the trail of some diamond smugglers, and as a result plenty of mystery was present at the Leyland line dock to-day when the Bohemian landed from Liverpool.

Breaking the usual rule, the customs inspectors asked that everybody be cleared of the ship at once. Neither were the forty saloon passengers allowed to land until 10 minutes after arrival.

A man who was thought to be a secret service agent ran about the passageways and consulted with the customs inspectors and then the passengers were allowed to land.

Those arriving from European ports are to be subjected to the same close scrutiny. The affair on the Bohemian was a false alarm.

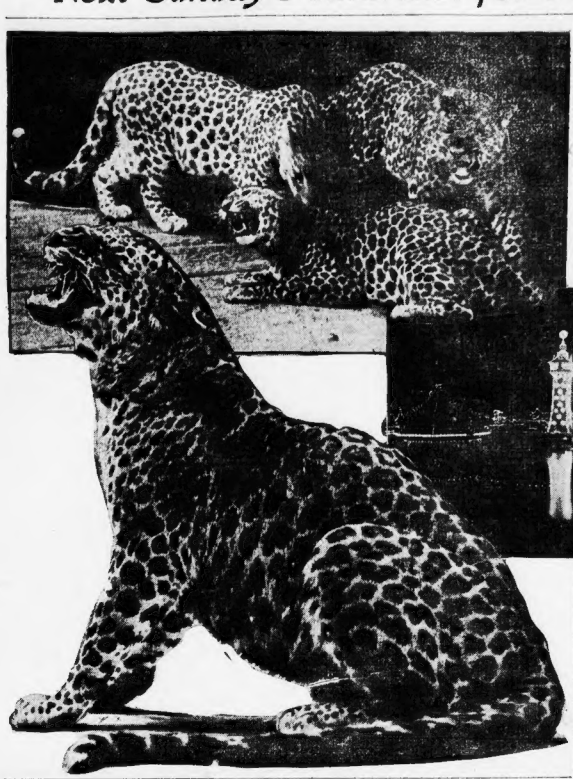
Greatest Free Ticket Offer Yet Made in Next Sunday's American for Paragon Park



25-Cent Coupon to Bostock's Big Animal Circus Included in Gift.

Bostock's Animal Circus, the Roller Coaster and free admission to Paragon Park, with its extraordinary free circus, is the scheme in next Sunday's AMERICAN for free ticket holders Monday and Tuesday, day or evening, at the Electric City by the Sea.

The great Bostock show regularly charges twenty-five cents admission. The Roller Coaster (and there is no better ride for the hot days) is regularly ten cents. Admission to the park and the great free circus is ten cents.

Combined, these make a free ticket for Paragon Park worth forty-five cents. It is the greatest Paragon Park free ticket gift yet.

The Paragon Park free circus is alone worth going miles to see. Early this week the crowds were far greater than expected, and next week, with the added attractions of the great Bostock show, will be a record-breaker.

The more one studies Sadie Knowlton's "Dare-Devil Dip" the more impressed they are that she is among the most fearless persons in the world. Without a net to catch her if she fails while riding her bicycle down the hundred-foot incline but three feet wide, invisible of swimming well enough to save herself from death by drowning in the ten-foot lagoon, combatting wind and weather, this daring young lady has missed only one performance since the opening of her engagement.

At the bottom of the incline she shoots up and out into the air, kicks her wheel into a little net arranged to receive it, then saving the wheel from injury, turns in the air and splashes into deep water fifty feet beyond, from which she is rescued by an experienced swimmer.

Investigation of the tank reveals only hard wood sides and bottom, the whole lined with canvas and no spring beds or nets to protect him from neck-breaking contact with the bottom if he fails to strike the surface of the water right.

"Suppose you should lose your eyesight for a moment and couldn't gather your self in the air and direct your fall by watching your arms like wings?" was asked of the champion high diver.

"Oh, I suppose I would find the tank somehow, probably from habit or intuition."

The Bostock show is an hour and a half long. It includes the finished performance with Teddy bears, an almost human exhibition by "Eph," the baby elephant, a kangaroo that boxes with his trainer, a startling performance of spiteful leopards, a hair-raising show with four large and angry lions and a mixed performance between lions and tigers, either of them enough to make visitors shiver and hold their breath.

TIGHTEN LEGAL COILS AROUND E. H. HARRIMAN

Chain Being Formed by Government for Magnate in Railway Investigation.

HARD FIGHT IS ASSURED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The decision of the attorney-general to require E. H. Harriman to show cause why he should not be required to answer questions put by the Interstate Commerce Commissioners in its investigation of his railway interests last November is but a link in the chain now being forged about the railway magnate.

If he answers the questions they may establish the fact of his control of the Illinois Central. A refusal to comply with the court's order will lay him in Rhode Island open to heavy fine and imprisonment for contempt.

It is understood from Harriman's lobby here that he will resist to the utmost the government's efforts. There is a law covering just such a case, granting any witness absolute immunity from prosecution in answering questions that might incriminate him. It is said Harriman's defenders will insist under such immunity an American citizen cannot constitutionally be compelled to answer questions that might hold him up to the reproach of his fellow-men.

Pending the present action the department of justice is carefully going over the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the Harriman investigation, so that prompt action may be taken in execution of its policy as soon as such ruling is secured in the suit just brought in New York city.

MABEL SPENCER SECRETLY WEDS RICH MERCHANT

Brookline Florodora Girl Now Touring New England With Her Husband.

After a month of secrecy the news that Mabel Spencer of Brookline has become the wife of Robert Dornan, 2d, of Philadelphia, has become public.

The wedding, which occurred at the Lincoln House, Round the Corner in New York a month ago, was the outcome of a romance which began in London last June, when Miss Spencer was playing in that city as the Chicago girl in "The Song Bird Girls" in "The Prince of Pilsen."

She is a graduate of the Emerson School of Oratory and has been a member of the "Floradora" company, "The Sultan from Washington" and the "Wizard" company.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Spencer of No. 9 Addington road, Brookline.

Her husband, with whom she is now spending her honeymoon at the New England resorts along the South Shore, is a son of the late Robert Dornan, who established the carpet manufacturing firm of Dornan & Brothers of Philadelphia. A bridegroom is connected with what business.

He served in the Spanish War as a member of Battery B, 1st Pa. and Mrs. Spencer will live in Philadelphia.

WHIPS CAPTAIN OF POLICE IN DARK TUNNEL

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—In a mighty mêlée man who took advantage of the darkness of a rapid transit tunnel to lay up Police Captain Michael Gunn on the nose and then make his getaway in the gloom.

All Staten Island's sleuths are abroad to-day looking for the miscreant who perpetrated the outrage. Who makes matters worse, an innocent man may suffer vicariously for the real offender's sin.

Captain Gunn, who is commander of the New Dorp, S. I., station, Edgar L. Ricks lives at Port Richmond, Ricks' Fire and Game Warden he has been active to active Captain Gunn thinks some of the crabs and lobster fishermen of the Staten Island coast.

When the two met, therefore, on a Staten Island rapid transit train there was a sudden outburst of eloquence on both sides.

Then the tunnel—it's between Tompkinsville and New George—and at last a lucid interval. No sooner had daylight yielded to the scene than a crash sounded and those of the passengers fought it was a head-on collision and were much frightened.

Their fears were relieved as fight appeared again. His nose shifted to one side of his face, greatly enlarged and steaming with gore. Captain Gunn sent Ricks and, when the train stopped, handed him over to Staten Island police. There the Magistrate paroled him for further examination August 21.

Ricks pleads not guilty. He expresses the opinion that the complaint against the officer talk and waited be the proval. to give tangible form to its disap-

GIRL DIED TO SAVE BOY HELPLESS IN DEEP WATER

Miss Edith Gregor of North Attleboro Drowned in Rescue Attempt.

By Long Distance Telephone to the Boston American.

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Aug. 14.—Preparations are being made here to-day for the bringing home and burial of the body of Miss Edith M. Gregor, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Gregor of this city, who yesterday lost her life in a vain attempt to save Clyde Morrison, aged eight years, of Belmont, who fell into a mill pond at Wentworth, N. H., where both were visiting.

Miss Edith M. Gregor.

The little Morrison boy and two young playmates were jumping at the edge of the pond, and suddenly the child slid down the steep bank into the deep water. Miss Gregor heard his shrieks and plunged into the water after him. In his frenzied struggles the child locked his arms around Miss Gregor, preventing her swimming. She struggled in vain to release him, but the two dragged her down with him.

The affrighted boys on the bank were too badly scared to think of summoning help until it was too late to do anything but call men to drag the pond for the bodies.

Miss Gregor, who was about thirty-five years of age, had been a teacher in the public schools at Plymouth for one year, but she had always made her home with her parents here, and was an admired member of the Trinity Congregational Church.

The heroic girl was born in Taunton and was graduated from the public schools and the Bridgewater and Rhode Island Normal schools. For some years Miss Gregor taught school in Quincy, North Attleboro and Newton.

Her parents have lived here for many years. One brother, Harry, is a clerk in the custom house at Boston, while another brother, Fred, is a letter carrier in this city.

REBELLION IN CUBA SWEEPS OVER ISLAND

Scores of Armed Bands Said to Be Planning General Uprising.

HAVANA, Aug. 14.—The whole island of Cuba is in a state of excitement to-day on account of continuous petty rebellious in every section.

A sensation was caused to-day when the authorities learned that a careful plot had been laid for a general uprising in August, 1907.

Gangs of from fifteen to fifty men have been organized in all parts of the island, armed themselves and taken to the woods, according to reports constantly coming in.

It was discovered that bands have been ordered by some unknown leader to delay depredations until the day set for the general uprising, when it is planned to stun the rebellious bushwhacking warfare simultaneously from one end of the island to the other.

Fear Raid on Property.

The authorities are to determine whether the movement is of such definite organization as to contemplate an effort to establish a serious revolution, with the ultimate purpose of gaining control of the government.

Owners of plantations and all big property interests in the island are greatly disturbed by the reports, and it is feared heavy property loss will result if the desperadoes really make a concerted attack.

In some sections it is said armed bands already have seized provisions and articles desired for their comfort in the woods.

Break May Come Monday.

The authorities quickly took advantage of the discovery of the plot, and steps were taken immediately to prevent serious damage if possible.

Many of the bands, however, are in the remote sections of the islands and in the mountains where it is practically impossible to reach them. These men, it is expected, will follow the instructions to begin revolutionary methods next Monday.

BUFFALO, Aug. 14.—Seven cottages at Crystal Beach, owned and occupied by Buffalo people, were destroyed by fire last evening, and two other cottages located near the scene were saved with difficulty by a fire brigade. MOTHER FINDS BABE DROWNED IN WASH TUB

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 14.—While the mother was absent from the kitchen for a brief period, little nineteen-months-old Mary Samson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samson of Main street, Warren, was drowned in a tub of wash water left standing on the floor.

Mrs. Samson, who is the mother of seven small children, was engaged yesterday afternoon doing the weekly wash. The remaining children were at play in the yard. The mother left the kitchen, crossing a narrow hall to another room, where she was occupied sorting out clothes. A neighbor engaged Mrs. Samson in conversation for a few minutes, but the mother had called to the child twice and received a response, which assured her of the little one's safety. Never dreaming of there being a possibility of the baby's exploring the big tub of water on the floor, the woman entered a room opposite the kitchen and completed the work she set out to do, which she claimed took less than five minutes.

Upon her return to the kitchen she was horrified to see the child head first in the tub of washing fluid, with legs protruding in the air, its little body already still in death. Neighbors heard the mother's shrieks, and Dr. T. G. Morrisseau was hurriedly summoned, in a vain effort to revive the little one.

GIRLS SEE YOUTH DROWN

Richard Nagle of Dorchester, aged 22 years, was drowned in Lake Massabesic, near Manchester, N. H., this morning, before the eyes of fifty horror-stricken young vacationists from Boston. Young Nagle and a party of Boston friends had come to Lake Massabesic for a vacation, and this morning, despite the warning of boatmen, ventured in a canoe on the lake while a strong wind prevailed.

With two companions, who reside in Auburn Village, Nagle ventured out, announcing that they were prepared for a trip over and could swim. When 300 yards from shore the canoe was swamped. The three occupants struck out for shore. Nagle was seized with cramps and sank. His cries for help were heard by vacationing parties of girls on the shore, but no means of rescue were at hand. A boat put out and brought Nagle's companions, who had made an effort to save him, to the shore. Nagle's body has not been recovered.

EDISON ASKS INJUNCTION.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 14.—Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, has filed a petition in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia for an injunction against Theodore Moor of this city, enjoining him from manufacturing a certain improvement in connection with kinetographic cameras.

MOORS IN MAD CHARGE TAKE FRENCH POST

7,000 Fanatics Drive Out Casablanca Defenders—Troops Retake Station Bravely.

TANGIER, Aug. 14.—Seven thousand fanatical Moors rushed the outposts at Casablanca last night, drove out the French and Spanish defenders of one of the stations and held it against the foreign troops for over an hour. Only the most desperate fighting by the soldiers enabled them to regain possession of the outpost, which was finally carried by a bayonet attack.

News of the fight reached here to-day. Hundreds of the Moors were slain or wounded during the fighting and the troops likewise lost several men, according to the message.

The attack of the Moors was made shortly after midnight. Mounted on Arabian horses the natives charged directly against the earthworks, unmindful alike of rifle fire or shrapnel from the guns.

The outer defenses were rushed, the soldiers being compelled to retreat. The Moors established themselves there. Moors were repulsed at other points and driven off. Reinforcements were then pursued to the forces which had been driven out and the outpost retaken.

Plan Interior Campaign.

The French troops at Casablanca have been ordered to prepare for a campaign in the interior of Morocco. Spanish troops are being rushed to that port and will hold the city while the French will press on after the warring tribesmen in an effort to end the holy war before it assumes organized shape, and teach the Moors a terrible lesson. Nothing else will stop the looting and slaughter in Morocco and establish peace in the country.

The fanaticism of the Moors is the one obstacle that must be overcome by the European powers before fighting ceases. It is fanaticism alone that in the last battle, brought the Moors back to attack the French soldiers after suffering terrible losses.

Moors Secure Artillery.

Shrapnel and a hail of bullets inflicted terrible loss on the Moors, but they did not abandon the fight until the leaders decided on strategic methods. The French captured many valuable horses belonging to the cavalry of the tribesmen.

The Moors have secured from some source several pieces of artillery, which are being mounted in the hills about Casablanca. Notwithstanding their ignorance in handling field artillery, if these pieces are got into working order, the French position will be untenable. It was because of this fact that General Drude decided to drive the Moors from the hills about Casablanca and follow them up in the interior, mowing them down with machine guns and rifle fire until the Holy War is ended.

The nail was withdrawn and the hemorrhage stopped in a few minutes, and Albright rallied and continued to gain, until now it is believed he may recov-

LANDIS BLOCKS IMMUNITY BATH

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Judge Landis of the Federal district bench will return from Indianapolis to-day, and may make the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company some trouble, despite the reports from Washington that immunity baths would be accorded to those roads which had aided in furnishing information concerning the prosecution of the Standard Oil Company recently.

It is understood that the so-called "immunity bath" was promised by the former district attorney, Mr. Morrison, to the Alton people, in view of the fact that the testimony furnished by their officials made possible the conviction which was rounded out by the $29,240,000 fine.

SAYS WELLMAN WILL FIND POLE

That Walter Wellman will reach the North Pole is the belief of J. M. Longyear, of Brookline, who arrived here to-day on the Leyland liner Bohemian, from Liverpool.

"On July 7 last," Mr. Longyear said, "I visited Mr. Wellman at Spitzbergen. I saw his new airship and noted the confidence of himself and his men. I feel that his expedition, although it starts from the spot from which the ill-fated Andree left, will be profitable and that he will gain the pole.

"I went as far north as Danes Island, and visited several fine coal fields in the north of Europe, in which I shall interest myself."

Pretty School Teachers Strangely Turned Adrift

Miss Florence Staples, one dismissed school teacher, and some of the pupils at Hanson.

Did Walloping of Big Boys by One Young Lady Cause Her Dismissal, Hanson Folks Ask.

HANSON, Aug. 14.—Baffled by the returning of its school committee, this Plymouth county village is face to face with a puzzle beside which the age of Ann was child's play. Was Miss Grace E. Delano fired from her position as the teacher's desk of South Grammar School because she walloped the big boys not wisely but too well, or was she dismissed because she was unable to cope with the situation? And, therefore, what does the school committee want, a Honey Mellody, a Mike Twin—or just a mollycoddle teacher?

They'll Tell if Fired.

Although one of its members is a woman, the school committee is keeping its secret. Having angered the townspeople by a hasty remark: "We will tell the town of Hanson way we have dropped nearly all the teachers, if we are compelled to tell, but the town will be sorry if it insists on knowing," the committee now goes so far as explaining that this remark was not meant to be a reflection in even the slightest degree on the teaching staff.

These are the teachers who "failed of re-election" on Friday night's meeting of the school board:

Grace E. Delano.
Florence E. Staples.
Mailnda Carr.
Maud Rand.
Grace Friend.
Mabel Magiathlin.

Bessie Ayers and Marion Phillips were re-elected. Marion's mamma, Mrs. Lizzie Phillips, is chairman of the school board.

"But I didn't vote for her," says Chairman Phillips, speaking of her daughter, "and I wouldn't do so. My associates, Postmaster Warren A. Stevens and the Rev. George S. Chase, both voted to retain her."

Miss Delano was offered a primary school, in place of the South Grammar, where she had been in charge for a full year, and she stepped on in preference to stepping down. The town of Kingston snapped up Florence Staples at a higher salary than Hanson could pay.

Malinda Carr was dropped almost without explanation after a series of thirty-five years in the schools of Hanson.

Was She Too Strenuous?

The impression prevails in the village that Miss Delano lost the South Grammar stakes because she had won the all-round championship from its able contestant students.

Hanson means to find out about it, however, at the next town meeting. The committeemen and lady say that they'll "tell all" if the town crowds 'em. There is an impression in the village that perhaps the State Superintendent of Public Instruction could solve the riddle.

"The schools of Hanson," said one member of the committee, "have stood second lowest in the State. The Commonwealth informed us that something must be done, to get our schools out of the class of 'poor,' or we would be withdrawn. We were plainly told that we must employ none but Normal school graduates, or, at least, teachers who could pass the standard examination."

The town insists that this "explanation" will not cover the case of Grace Delano, whom the committee offered a lower-grade school if only she would give up the South Grammar.

The Enigmatic Way.

"Well," answers a member of the committee, somewhat enigmatically, "if people would only whale their troublesome children at home, they wouldn't have to complain about teachers."

And Hanson recalls that Stephen Ferguson remained only one year in charge at the South Grammar, that Miss Wade died a short time after giving up the same place, that Charles Perkins didn't stay much longer than Wade, and that now goes Miss Delano, after a single year.

And, "What's the matter with the South Grammar?" askes the South Shore folk of Hanson. "Are the pupils too unruly for the teacher, or was the latest teacher too hunky for the pupils?"

ROOT PLANS TO SAVE BIG TRUST HEADS

Big Meeting at Oyster Bay to Discuss Distressing Financial Situation.

BONAPARTE WAS ABSENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—There was an extraordinary meeting of President Roosevelt's Cabinet at Oyster Bay, the Summer capital, last night, at which the distressing financial situation was earnestly discussed. The one available member conspicuously absent was Attorney-General Bonaparte, whose recent utterances on the subject of trust baiting have aroused the ire of Wall Street.

This meeting followed the visit of Secretary Root and Assistant Secretary Bacon to New York yesterday. Mr. Bacon went to the Wall Street office of J. P. Morgan & Co., and was in conference with several influential financiers.

The street heard of the visit and interpreted it to mean that the administration policy was likely to be toned down. It marked the first rally in a falling market and led to heavy investment purchases of securities.

Root and Bonaparte Split.

That there is an acute split in the President's official family over the Government's policy for the immediate future, is no longer in doubt. So much that is said to be too wide to be bridged has come between Secretary Root and Attorney-General Bonaparte.

The fear of a "Roosevelt panic" is strong in the breasts of Secretary Root and his following in the cabinet, if the policy of heavily fining offending corporations is continued.

...er are believed to be ready to go so far as to demand that the initiative at Attorney-General leave the cabinet.

That Mr. Root himself will resign if Mr. Bonaparte does not go, and less rigorous methods are not adopted, is said to be highly probable.

The cabinet conference began at the President's Summer home shortly after 7 o'clock this evening.

Secretary Taft and Postmaster-General Meyer had been with the President all the afternoon. Secretary Cortelyou was summoned from his summer cottage home at West Neck. Assistant Secretary of State Robert Bacon, after his conference with New York bankers, hurried to Oyster Bay in an automobile.

Secret service officers kept all visitors away from Sagamore Hill during the evening while the conference was on. At 10 o'clock Taft and Meyer took a stroll outside and shot through Oyster Bay regardless of speed limitations. It was said they were hurrying to Jersey City to catch a midnight train for Washington.

Not a word came from President Roosevelt's cottage regarding the questions brought up at the conference.

To Tone Down Roosevelt's Policy.

Secretary Root, who is accompanied by Mrs. Root, reached here with the President last night. Secretary Root reached New York yesterday morning from his Summer home at Clinton, N. Y., and went to the house of Assistant Secretary Robert Bacon, Waldorf. Assistant Secretary Bacon came on from Washington to meet him.

With the idea of gathering nuggets for the struggle to tone down the President's policy, it was decided that Mr. Bacon go to Wall Street to see the big financiers.

Shortly after noon he went to the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., of which firm he was a member before he entered the government service, and was closeted with J. P. Morgan, Jr. It is said that James Stillman, president of the City National Bank, and another financier visited them.

To complete the conference the telephone was resorted to, as it was not deemed wise to have the financial leaders gathered in person.

Among those said to have been called on the telephone were Jacob Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.; James Speyer of Speyer & Co.; George F. Baker, president of the First National Bank; John S. Kennedy and William Rockefeller.

It was declared in Wall Street that these men had promised to tell Roosevelt that they could disregard Mr. Bonaparte's dreadful threats that he could shoot at random into the corporation camp and fill his game bag.

Speaker John N. Cole Now Declares He's Slated for Lieutenant-Governor's Job

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
SPEAKER'S ROOM
STATE HOUSE, BOSTON

Note—This modest letter of the Shoe Machinery Trust's pet printer was sent out on letter paper paid for by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Andover, Mass.

Dear Sir:

Inasmuch as several friends have understood that I am to be a candidate for Lieutenant Governor this coming fall, it seems wise that a statement should be made regarding my future political ambitions.

Through the long continued confidence of the Republican voters of Andover it has been my privilege to attain a high position in the affairs of our State. This position has placed me prominently before the people throughout the Commonwealth, and in such a way that it is generally conceded that at the next change in the makeup of the Republican ticket for State officers, which change will not take place until September, 1908, there is a strong probability of my nomination to the office of Lieutenant Governor.

To return to the House of Representatives assures me of a unanimous reelection to a customary third term as Speakor of that body. I shall, therefore, be a candidate in the coming fall for a reelection as a member of the House from Andover, and I ask your continued support for that position under the assurance of the highest endeavor on my part to worthily and honorably represent the town and the State.

In September, 1908, I shall hope to secure the endorsement of the Republicans of the State for the high office of Lieutenant Governor, but whether that shall come or not, the coming year will be the last or my service as a Representative in the General Court.

With high appreciation of the loyal support of Andover voters in the past, and gratefully recognizing your own personal interest in my political life, I am,

Cordially yours,

John N. Cole

Andover, Mass., August 7, 1907.

Shoe Machinery Trust's Printer Tells of His Own Worth.

ANDOVER, Aug. 14.—John N. Cole Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and Printer to the Shoe Machinery Trust while the trust was vitally affected by a bill pending before a Cole-appointed committee, is now modestly telling the 1,200 odd voters of Andover that he has "attained a high position in the affairs of our State," that he is "prominently before the people of the Commonwealth," that it is "generally conceded" that there is a strong probability of his being nominated for Lieutenant-Governor next year, and that it is therefore up to Andover to send him back to the State House in November.

Andover knows John Cole, and the phraseology of Cole letter was no surprise. What shocks Andover is that at this stage of the game even John Cole should have had the nerve to send out political advertising on splendid linen paper, bearing the seal of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and paid for by all the voters of the State, Republicans, Democrats, Independence Leaguers, Prohibitionists and Socialists alike.

His Stationery Graft.

For that is just what the nervy printer to the Shoe Machinery Trust has done, his latest political announcement, a facsimile of which is presented herewith, carries the seal of the State in the upper left hand corner of the letter-head

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Speaker's Room.
State House, Boston.

The letter, itself is dated "Andover, Mass., Aug. 7, 1907," which leads to the local inquiry as to whether or not Mr. Cole brings home with him to Andover the fine linen paper which is bought and paid for by all the people of Massachusetts.

As indicating that Cole's boom for Cole for the Lieutenant-Governorship is machine-made from start to finish it may be further set out that the particular copy under consideration is on linen paper turned out by Senator Crane's paper mills at Dalton.

"Crane & Co., Dalton, Mass., 1906," is the water-mark, plainly discernible on holding free of the sheet to the light.

Republicans, who is not among the most ardent admirers of the Shoe Machinery printer, says that perhaps this indicates that Crane is "back" of the Cole letter.

Enough of Cole.

A feeling that "Cole has had enough from Andover" is discernible here. It apparently lacks a leader. Cole feels supremely confident. He ought to. His own election to the Legislature of two years ago was followed by the action of the County Commissioners in trimming the Ninth Essex Representative district until it is credited with only 1,228 "regal" votes, the smallest in any Representative district of the State of Massachusetts.

Only one Boston ward—the Seventh—sends a smaller Representative. It takes 3,724 Bostonians in Ward 7 to get one Representative. Nearly one-third as many Bostonians in Andover have the same numerical representation on Beacon Hill, for in 1906 Andover had but 1,200 registered voters. The Guild vote was 643; Moran's, 478.

The latest example of Cole's boodle nerve has set Andover to thinking. The town is wondering, for instance, if the Crane boys didn't make enough out of the Shoe Machinery job to pay for the Printer's writing paper.

NOBLEMAN TO WED HEIRESS AND NO DOWRY

Real Love Marks Marriage of Elsie Moore to Duke Marino Torlonia.

TO HAVE SIMPLE CEREMONY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—A nobleman-heiress wedding of an entirely new sort will take place to-morrow afternoon, when Miss Elsie Moore, daughter of the million-aire hardware king, and the Duke Marino Torlonia, of Rome, are married in the magnificent Moore homestead at Greenwich.

The bride is bringing no dowry to her noble husband. Instead, she announced yesterday, he is giving to her a beautiful palace in the Eternal City, to say nothing of a diamond necklace and other costly jewels which members of his family are presenting.

Though Miss Moore has a fortune of her own, so has the Marino. It was a love match, from every indication. The handsome Italian and the pretty American girl thinking neither of riches nor palaces, they say—only of each other.

Simple Little Ceremony.

But the "simple little ceremony," as they call the wedding, promises to be a gorgeous affair. Invitations have been sent out for more than 120 guests and gifts and good wishes have been received already from more than twice that number.

Bellehaven, the Moore place at Greenwich, where Spring with the spirit of orange blossoms and chiming bells, when the bride-to-be welcomed an AMERICAN reporter yesterday.

"I'm sorry I can't show you all the diamonds I've received," she said, ruefully. "But this is going to be such a quiet little, rustic wedding that we thought it best to leave them in town in a vault."

Mamma and papa have given me a diamond stomacher that is too lovely for description. The Duke's brother has sent on a diamond tiara, and there are a number of other bejeeled pieces which the Duke's sister, the Marquise, is keeping for me until I get to Rome.

Linen Shower for Her.

"There will be the most beautiful of all my gifts, among which is an ancient bracelet of emeralds and diamonds hundreds of years old."

Miss Moore's mother insisted upon giving her a good old-fashioned linen shower the other night, to which went all her girl friends with bundles of damask and exquisite linens.

Of household effect Miss Moore says she already has received enough to equip a good-sized hotel.

PEACE MEN IN PERIL OF LIVES

THE HAGUE, Aug. 14.—The police have doubled the guard of M. Nelodiff, president of the Peace Conference, as it is feared that an attempt will be attempted. Russian Jew Bolsheviki, James Speyer of New York, and the Zionists, which began to-day. The Turkish delegates are being guarded. Turkhan Pasha and Rechid Bey recently received threatening letters from Armenians and Albanians who came here to attend the meeting regarding the protection of the races.

The plenary meeting of the sitting of the conference scheduled for to-day, has been postponed and probably will not be held. In the meantime the British delegates are drafting a scheme for the limitation of armaments in the most energetic terms consistent with the preservation of unanimity among the powers.

CANOE UPSETS, MAN DROWNED

Before the eyes of scores of people, Davis C. Mills, twenty, of Needham, was drowned in the Charles River at West Roxbury late yesterday afternoon, and in his death struggle nearly dragged to death Bert C. Watts, his companion, as the latter was trying to rescue him.

The young men were canoeing, and were trying to change seats when the frail craft overturned, precipitating both into the middle of the river.

Mills sank, and Watts, who is a strong swimmer, and had struck out for shore, returned to the spot where his friend had disappeared. The body was not seen until half an hour later.

Mills lived on Marshall street, Needham. Watts also lived at the same place.

For the past two weeks they had been camping on the Charles River near the spot where the tragedy occurred.

BARONET'S GRANDSON IS CONFESSED MURDERER

Special Cable to Boston American.
Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

MARSEILLES, Aug. 13.—Yere St. Leger Goold, grandson of an Irish baronet, confessed here to-day that he was the murderer of Emma Levin, a wealthy Swedish woman, whose dismembered body was found in the baggage of Mr. Goold and his wife upon their arrival here, August 6, from Monte Carlo.

The gruesome "trunk mystery" created much excitement, and it has since been learned that the Goolds were of good family. Their threatening letter to the Armenians and Albanians who came here to attend the meeting regarding the protection of the races.

Goold made his confession to the examining magistrate. He related coolly all the details of the horrible crime. He alone knows the motive, he declared, and it was he who cut up her body, although his wife helped him pack it away in their baggage.

After this had been done they both agreed to journey to Marseilles, where they planned to end the body into the sea.

Wife Admits Part in Crime.

Mrs. Violet Goold also confessed her part in the crime. She said her husband had promised to give Emma Levin the sum of $100, but she demanded $160 more. To this Mr. Goold objected, and said he would not pay the extra hundred. Thereupon Emma Levin abused him.

Referring to what happened next, Goold says in his confession:

"I had been drinking, and becoming angry, I seized a hunting knife and buried it in Emma's back. She fell dead. The next day I dismembered the body with a saw and a razor. Afterward, I put the torso in a trunk and the head and legs in a valise. To this my wife assisted the woman once. The other wounds on her body must have been caused by striking her in the trunk."

Goold said they carried off Emma Levin's jewels, not for their value, but in order to prevent their discovery in his apartment.

Porter Made Discovery.

Referring to his family, Goold said his grandfather was a baronet and his father an Irish magistrate. He said he had at one time served secretly on the Irish land commission in Dublin. In 1895 he moved to Monte Carlo, where he says he made a fortune.

He then went to Holland, and later moved to Monte Carlo. Mrs. Goold corroborated everything her husband said.

The discovery of what the Goolds' baggage contained was made by a Marseilles railroad porter, who noted suspicious stains on the trunks.

The Goolds, when arrested, declared that the woman had been killed in their apartment by a stranger and that in their delirium they were trying to get rid of the remains without exciting suspicion.

LOCATE WOMAN IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Anna Decourcy, sixty-five years of age, who since last Saturday has been mysteriously missing from 14 Canal street, has been found.

Last Saturday Mrs. Decourcy left her son's house to do some shopping. As she was passing along the street she slipped and fell, fracturing a bone in her thigh. She was hurried to the Relief Hospital, and after receiving first aid there was taken to the City Hospital.

The aged lady was badly confused to communicate with her friends and her son, who became very anxious about her.

BLUE BATH FOR LITTLE WILLIE

BANGOR, Aug. 14.—William Wellington Paddock, Jr., aged six, of Pembroke, is a sure-enough "little boy blue," temporarily, at any rate. The other day some of his playmates gave little William a complete bath in liquid bluing and sent him home yelling like an Indian. It was at first thought that the boy's eyesight might be affected by the dye, but that danger is past, and patient scrubbing will soon turn him white again. Daniel Gott and Arthur Stevens of Pembroke were arrested for dipping little William into the dye vessel, but were discharged by the court, it having been found that Stevens' father and not the guilty one. Ernest will get what is coming to him later on.

With them were the woman's three children, and they were taken to the House of Detention, while Trabucco was locked up in the Lagrange street police station.

The New York police notified the local authorities last night that the fugitives were wanted in New York for grand larceny, and they will be sent back to that city. When dressed Mrs. Bertali had $300 in her possession, while Trabucco had $17.

PIPE BURSTS ON TUG; MAN IS SCALDED

He was removed to Burbank Hospital in this city. Both of his arms, his chest and neck are burned. Part of his clothing caught fire.

The cause of the explosion is unknown, but the engineer thought that it was due to some unknown substance in the coal. The engine was disabled.

DANDRUFF AND ECZEMA CURED

Hair Had Been Falling Out Ten Years —Itching, Scaly Eczema Appeared on Scalp—Countless Remedies Failed—Suffering Ended

BY HALF A SET OF CUTICURA REMEDIES.

"When sixteen years old I noticed a dryness in my scalp and some hair falling out. This condition grew steadily worse for the next ten years, although I used bottle after bottle of different remedies which proved of no avail, and countless others whose names I have forgotten. I have also consulted several physicians but got no permanent relief. About a year ago, after using one of the remedies, I noticed my hair falling out more and my forehead bearing small scaly and running sores which sometimes appeared red and inflamed. In January of this year, when thoroughly disgusted and discouraged, I got a set of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills and gave them a fair trial. Within a few weeks the terrible itching had subsided and there was a general improvement in hair and scalp. In two months my scalp was as free and clear of dandruff and eczema as though I never troubled with it and there are no more hairs falling out than should fall from a healthy head. In I have not yet used one half the first set of the Cuticura Remedies, but I feel that the story of my case will be read by many similar sufferers and will prompt them to take advantage of a safe, sure, and permanent cure. SHALL WE SEND YOUNG GIRLS AWAY TO BOARDING SCHOOLS?

TEMPTATIONS OF THE IMPRESSIONABLE AGE

Through the Boarding School the Miss Passes Safely Past Temptation from Girlhood to Womanhood

BY DOROTHY DIX

SHALL we send our girls off to school when the schools at home offer just as good educational advantages as those at a distance is another one of the vexed problems that parents are lying awake at night just now debating among themselves.

Personally, I am an ardent advocate of the boarding school, and I believe that, when it can be done without too much of a sacrifice of the balance of the family, every girl should be sent away from home for the last two or three years of her schooling.

There are many reasons for this. One is that a boarding school, where no one has either the time or inclination to indulge the little ways and the morbid tendency of Mamie or Sadie that her family have been just now busily engaged in ferreting out and carefully cherishing all of her life, is a heaven-ordained means of regeneration for the spoiled American girl.

Another is that it rides mother and daughter over the crucial years of hobble-dehoyism in which each certain is put on maternal patience and dial devotion, and still another is that it offers a practical and diplomatic method of breaking up undesirable social connections that a girl may have formed in childhood.

All of this is part of education, the education that fits one for the life she is to lead, and that is quite as important as any book learning.

Home Ways

TAKE the matter of social amenities, for instance.

Every mother who does her duty devotes a great deal of time and attention to trying to teach her daughter good manners, and to observe the little niceties of conduct that stamp a woman as a lady, but only with the hall mark of the class to which she has been born as the Diamond O or the Circle A that is seared with a red-hot iron on the hides of the cattle of girl is the advantage of having her away from home during the time that she thinks she knows it all, and when she is chafing under the restraint of home discipline.

The boarding school does this without any friction between mother and daughter, that leaves no sore spots or sore hearts that never heal.

Worse still, it is a time of great danger to the girl, for if she will not accept what wants to have beaux and go to parties and do the other things that their foolish and injudicious mothers often permit her girl associates to do, and her own mother tries to prevent her doing, she is very apt to develop a crop of lying and deceit and sneaking ways on the sly and going to forbidden places that may end in God only knows what tragedy.

Easiest Way

THE easy road out of this dilemma is to send Sadie or Mamie off to school.

That will settle the boy question without any argument, since neither beaux, nor parties, nor theatres are part of the curriculum of a girls' school.

More than that, Sadie's mind will be at peace, and she will be able to devote her time and attention to her studies, instead of having it distracted by wondering whether some one special is waiting in front of the school door to carry her books home for her or for an afternoon call.

Furthermore, no one will dispute that school worth the price.

while a girl is at school she should live the simple life, and that seems to be only possible when she is badly removed from the temptation of going to matinees and dances and dinners and to clubs and having juvenile love affairs.

This can only be done by sending her away from home, for as long as she is at home it is impossible to keep her the privileges of the other girls are doing and going where the other men-folks of the family go. Off at school she is at least in a studious atmosphere, safe from getting into premature entanglements of the affection, and, best of all, by the time she is through and returned home to live with the family have accepted the fact that she is grown up and entitled to certain rights and privileges, and they accord them to her without any of the disagreeable wrangles that do so much to weaken the bond of affection between parents and children.

Worth the Price

A FINAL argument in favor of sending a girl off to school is that it broadens her whole horizon.

As long as she was at home she was the focal point about which the universe circled. What she thought was the most important thing in the world, what she wanted the one thing that must be done, what she said the utterance of the oracle.

At school she gets another point of view, and does her good to the longest day she lives.

When she sees girls more opulent in their neglected state nobody notices it, or if they do they call her cranky and peculiar instead of speaking of it in an awesome whisper as Sadie's smallness does.

When she gets her feelings hurt nobody cares and nobody sympathizes, and as for her cleverness that used to make her family regard her as a genius, why she's drowned with girls that know so much more than she does and are so much brighter in every way that she gets her head reduced to its proper size.

A girl is a more livable creature she has the sand of hard knocks in her and the edge of the polish of a boarding school, and this reason alone makes sending a girl off to school worth the price.

Is the Mother-Love Instinct Menaced By the Teddy Bear?

By Beatrice Fairfax

ARE Teddy Bears a menace to the mother-love instinct?

A Western clergyman declares that they are.

He says that the boy bears in the arms of the little girls are destroying all the instincts of motherhood.

Father Esper may be a very good and wise man, but all the wise men in the world do not know as much about mother love as does the tiny matron of five, who dotes on her doll baby or even her Teddy Bear in her chubby arms.

It is an instinct that can never be destroyed till the heart of woman shall cease to beat.

Has Father Esper noticed, I wonder, that the dear babies have dressed their Teddy Bears in dolls clothes, and that they are as carefully tucked up in the miniature baby carriages as though they were flesh and blood babies?

Are Not Beasts

THE little mothers simply don't look on the bears as beasts.

In imagination they transform them into babies and cuddle them accordingly.

I have seen many a Teddy Bear in family go off in baby doll clothes, dress, bonnet, cape, even a veil over its face, and bending over it with every solicitude or anxious young mother aged six.

Children have small sense of humor, so it never enters their heads that a brown plush bear looks rather ridiculous in a white cap. Also the sympathy appeals to them. It is a fad that will not last long, and it never would have gained any hold at all if the bears had not been so easily transformed into pretend babies.

Father Esper need have no fear of the bears supplanting the dolls in the little mother's affections. They have merely taken their place among the dolls for the time being, as something new to lavish love and attention upon.

There is scarcely a woman living who does not remember the thrill of ecstacy over each new doll as it arrived. There never could be too many, and the oldest and shabbiest were tucked away every night with just as much tenderness as the grand new beauty fresh from the shop.

Will Still Reign

PERSONALLY I know of one dear old dolly that is occasionally taken out of her wrappings and tenderly reminisced over. Her name is Lin Gay, and judging from her battered appearance, her owner was a strenuous, if loving, mamma.

There is no nation on earth, even the most savage and primitive, where the little girls do not play with dolls. Sometimes a doll will be be merely a stick wrapped in rags, but some small girl will croon and murmur above it.

Republics may rise and empires may crumble; men will go on making war and history; but nothing can ever change the fact that beautiful, steadfast mother love and instinct.

It is born in woman, and even though the doll factories close down, and there are seen no toy babies save Teddy Bears, the mother love instinct would still reign paramount in the hearts of the little mothers.

The list of prize-winners in last week's contest will be announced in next Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

Despondency; and the Way to Cure It

THERE are some people in this world who invariably think the worst of every one and every thing, who magnify a cut finger into probable death from blood poisoning, an ordinary cold into pneumonia, and domestic troubles into veritable tragedies; while there are others who see a silver lining in every cloud, and who are ever soliciting for possible rays of light that even the blackest clouds fail to banish utterly.

When you feel gloomy down on your luck the best thing you can do is to do it. You can. It may be inconvenient; you may be dreadfully tired; but break off work for a little while and go out for a bit, to visit a sick friend if possible, or to do some little kindly act.

You will find the effect most beneficial and come back able to take up your work with infinitely more cheery frame of mind, or spend those precious moments in a delightful trying not to think of anything. Once let the habit of being absolutely free from you in a real way by means easy to effect a cure.

A good way of getting over it is to make a habit of writing down your little grievances and worries in a diary set aside for that purpose.

Another plan is to think of the troubles some of your friends have to contend with and compare your own with theirs.

Think of all the good things you have, the blessings every one has, and you think so much—children, perhaps—the little home and the husband.

Loneliness tends to produce down-heartedness, for the wise woman will make it a point of frequently going to see her friends, and will keep correspondence with those who are away, and taking interest in their welfare.

Selfishness produces down-heartedness, for little wifee—the kind of selfishness that thinks a very great deal about itself and its virtues, how little it is appreciated, and how much it has to endure, when, as a matter of fact, many of people have very much worse things against which they must contend.

Of course, it is hard, dreadfully hard, to be cheerful, cheery, with a smiling face. It's not nearly so difficult to worry through somehow, but it is almost impossible sometimes to do it cheerfully and in the right spirit.

But think what it means to your husband if you can be cheerful in times of difficulty. Remember that if you give him the vein you make his burden twice doubly heavy, for he will feel that he has married not from a comfortable home wrongfully, that his love does not compare favorably for you have had to sacrifice, and anything is better than that.

Be brave, then, and show your husband and comforter. Be brave—brave and strong, and defy the vile fiend despondency.

Some Tips for the Home Dressmaker

Rough Goods Popular

SMOOTH cloths, which have had quite a vogue for several seasons, will continue to be used for the Fall tailored suits. Rough fabrics are, however, coming to the front. They will be found most serviceable for general wear.

Scotch cheviots, and worsteds in stripes and plaids in two-tone effects and subdued colors will be the popular fabrics.

In some of the new fancy cloths, a combination of three colors is so artistically carried out as to be exceedingly attractive.

No Long Skirts for Us

PARIS has given the very short skirt of early Spring, has of late weeks favored those of extreme length, but it would seem, however, not likely to adopt this style immediately. Certainly it will be a favorite for the tailored suit.

For Different Occasions

MORE pronounced than ever is the difference between fabrics appropriate for street wear and those for formal occasions. For calling and afternoon affairs, even where the short skirt is worn, plain broadcloth, silk and velvet costumes will be in favor.

Save Bits of Lace

SAVE all the bits of lace and embroidery left from making Summer gowns. They may be utilized for making the dainty little ties and collars now so popular for wear with linen collars.

Enter Long Sleeves

SLEEVES will be longer! Such is the decree which has gone forth from fashion centres. For elaborate gowns and waists, short sleeves will continue to be worn; but for street wear the very sensible style of three-quarter or full-length sleeves will prevail. To the woman of moderate means this decree has been greeted over the expense of providing herself with long sleeved gowns and coats. However, this will be welcome news.

The favorite style for tailored suits promises to be of the glove or leg-of-mutton type, which is close fitting and everything but close fitting over the lower part of the arm, which is very frequently in a sharp point over the hand.

Lace Is Favorite

LACE is the favorite trimming for dainty dresses, and promises to continue in style. Filet lace in bands and galloons is largely used. Irish crochet, point and real Irish lace are also popular. Fancy buttons make an effective ornamentation. Japanese buttons in enamel and gold and those of polished china with gilt borders are artistic, and ensure the simplest costume. Indeed, it is, after all, the tasteful trimmings, skillfully applied or otherwise, which make or mar the gown.

Advice to Anxious Sweethearts

By Beatrice Fairfax

INVITE HIM TO THE PARTY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl nineteen years of age and have been going with a young man over a year. He called only five weeks ago, when he ceased calling. He gave no reason or excuse. We met him very often. He bows and says "Good evening," and seems anxious to stand and talk.

Now, a friend of his tells me he talks so well of me and wants to be friends again. Please advise me your kindest advice as to what I should do and say to him.

I am having a party a week from Sunday, and if I don't see him before shall I invite him to same? M. V.

INVITE him to the party if you want to. If he is very anxious to renew the friendship he will probably stop and speak to you some time when he sees you.

WHICH TO MARRY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty-two. I have been keeping company with a young woman for the past eight months. Now, Miss Fairfax, I think this young lady is more interested in my salary, which is $20 per week, than myself. This young lady has a friend who I admire very much, and I think she likes me for myself and not for my salary. Now would you advise me to give up the first young lady and marry the other one whom I think loves me? Kindly give me your advice. HAROLD.

YOU cannot be very much in love with either young lady if you can think about marrying in this way. I certainly would advise you to be more certain of either your or a girl's affections before contemplating such a serious step as matrimony.

WRITE AND ASK FOR IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm a young man, twenty years of age, and would like to have a little advice from you. A young lady came to the store where I am employed, and showed her a few of my pictures, when another young lady came in and took my fifteen picture and kept it. Now do you think it proper for me to ask her mother for it, because I do not care for the young lady, and do not want her to have my picture.

DO not ask her mother, just write and tell the girl you are sorry you have to ask her for it, but you would very much like to have it back. I think you will find that she will return it at once.

Just Freckles

"MR. Bullsom can look after himself, and uncommonly well, too," Mr. Bullsom answered.

"It seems a pity that you should care so much for that sort of thing," Selina remarked. "As a rule it is the frumpy and uninteresting people who go in for visiting the poor and doing good, isn't it? You seem so young, and so—oh, I don't think I'd bother about it."

"Please do," Brooks begged.

"Well, you won't think I was trying to flatter, will you, but I was going to say—and you clever, for that sort of thing."

Brooks smiled.

"Perhaps," he said, "the reason that social reform is urgently needed in so many ways is for that very reason. Miss Bullsom—but the wrong sort of person has been going in for it. Looking after the poor has been left for the people who are making our bits of charity on the toasting fork of religion. And that sort of thing doesn't tend to bridge over the gulf, does it?"

"You have all the answers ready, Brooks, of course," said Mr. Bullsom. "Try and put a bit of common sense into us."

"Of course I did," Brooks answered, "and I told you from the first that I never were going to make a lot of money by it. I never knew your game, though."

"It's half a million," Mr. Bullsom said, pulling down his waistcoat and squaring himself to the table. "Not bad, eh, for a country spot?"

"Wonderful"

"It's wonderful," Brooks admitted. "I congratulate you heartily."

"Thanks," Mr. Bullsom answered.

"Your father should stand for Parliament himself," Brooks suggested.

If is really possible that Mr. Bullsom, being a man governed entirely by one idea at a time, had never seriously considered the possibility of himself sniping outside the small circle of local politics. It is certain, at any rate, that Brooks's words came to him as an inspiration. He stared for a moment into his glass—then at Brooks. Finally he banged his fist down on the fat of his hand.

"It's an idea!" he exclaimed. "Why not?"

"Why not, indeed?" Brooks answered. "You'd be a popular candidate for the borough."

"I'm chairman of the committee," Mr. Bullsom declared; "I'll propose myself. I've taken the chair at political dinners and meetings for the last twenty years. I know the ruts, and the people of Manchester know me. Why not, indeed? Mr. Brooks, sir, you're a genius!"

Selina and Louise exchanged glances, and Selina, as the elder, got the prudent her languid approval.

"It would be quite for us in a way," she remarked, "Of course, you would have a house in London during the season, and as M. P. would get cards for us to a lot of at homes and things. Only I wish you were a Conservative."

A Liberal is much more fashionable than he was," Brooks assured her, cheerfully.

CHAPTER IX.

A New Don Quixote

BROOKS reached London the next evening to find himself famous. The evening papers, one of which he had purchased en route, were one and all discussing his new charitable scheme. He found himself held up at once to ridicule and contempt—praised and blamed almost in the same breath. He drove at once to Ropner, and found his headquarters besieged by a crowd which his little staff of helpers was wholly incapable of coping with, and a dozen reporters waiting to snatch a word with him. Mary watched his entrance with a little sigh of relief.

"I'm so glad you have come," she exclaimed. "It is hard to send these people away, but the fact is, they have come from all parts of London? Neither Mr. Flitch nor I can make them understand that we can only deal with cases in the immediate neighborhood. You must try."

Brooks stood up at once.

Growlings

"I am very sorry," he said, "if there has been any misunderstanding, but I want you to remember this. It is impossible for us to deal with any cases but those unless you are residents of the immediate neighborhood. Please put them on the front door. Please do not present yourselves before any of the desks unless you belong to one of them."

There was a murmur of disappointment, and in the background a few growls.

"I hope before very long," Brooks continued, "that we shall have a great many more branches open, and be able to offer help to a lot of you. But at present we cannot make any exceptions. Will every one except neighbors please help us by leaving the room?"

The reporters were quick to see that they had got to grapple with them. We shall be glad to know more about your scheme, sir," they said, "and if you will come over to the office we will do the fullest possible justice to it."

"And may I ask if that is a sample of your daily correspondence?" the reporter asked, pointing to the table.

"I have never had more than twenty letters at a time in my life," he answered. "There seems to be almost as many thousands there. I suppose, a result of the press booming our scheme. I will look at it all. I will forgive my remarking it," said the reporter, "there ought to be a good many registered letters. I understood that you had a clerk appointed to the publication of subscriptions."

"Have I," Brooks answered, stretching out his hand. "If there is a clerk, it is the first I have heard of him."

He plunged into a correspondence as dozens of letters were opened, and bundles letters of abuse, of sympathy, of friendly advice, of impertinence, of all sorts.

There were small sums of money, and a few larger ones. He was amused to find that a great many people addressed him as "Dear Sir," and everywhere it seemed to be understood that his enterprise was an entirely local one.

And finally there was a long packet, marked as having been delivered by hand, and inside—without a word of any sort, but Brooks's name on the envelope—a bank note for one thousand pounds.

MASTERFUL BRIDE FOR SHERLOCK HOLMES DOYLE

Miss Jean Leckie, from her firs-. photograph to reach America.

Query: Will the Famous Novelist Meekly Submit to the Control of a Beautiful Wife?

Enter: Mrs. Sherlock Holmes.

For Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, man of science, master of concentrated thinking, mental vivisectionist, is going to be married next month to Miss Jean Leckie.

Sir Arthur is an Englishman. Miss Leckie is a through going, outdoor English woman. Her parents are wealthy. Miss Leckie is said to be a most masterful young woman.

What will she do to the future Sherlock Holmes stories? Will she command her husband to introduce into them a woman detective who goes snooping around into dark corners, whipping out tape measures and microscopes, and footing it alone at night across some lonely heath in search of a murderer or two?

Or will she stay at home, and then when Sir Arthur is writing—

"At this point, my dear Watson, I became convinced that the murder was not the work of a man, but of a woman who had come into the house disguised as a baking powder agent. I was alone in the house at the time I reached this conclusion, and I turned, and opening the door started to walk into the hall. I stumbled over the body—

"Arthur, dear, lay down your work at once, and come to tea."

Arthur, meekly: "Yes, love."

Is Sir Sherlock Holmes to be washed away in tea or worn out from too much hard work in the furnace at 4, 5, no, 7 Will his place be taken by a lady detective with a reticule and cuff papers?

It is up to Mrs. Sherlock Holmes.

ELOPING PAIR NOW HELD ON THEFT CHARGE

Sweetheart Blames Fair Mary Condon for Taking Her Father's Gold.

FACE CAMBRIDGE COURT.

The romance and elopement of Mary Condon, eighteen years of age, of No. 42 Murray street, Cambridge, and Tony Agro, aged twenty-one, of No. 25 Riverside avenue, Watertown, came to grief to-day when Judge Almy in the Cambridge Police Court held them both for the Grand Jury in $500 each on charges of stealing $500, a $50 gold watch and two gold rings, the property of the girl's father, William Condon, a switch-tender of the Boston Elevated.

The couple eloped last Saturday and almost at the same time the father missed his money and his valuables. They were found yesterday by Policeman Malloy of Cambridge, in Watertown, and soon locked up.

In court to-day each denied guilt and blamed the other.

"Tony tod me to take the money from my father and that he would marry me," said Mary, with a defiant toss of her head and in a sullen tone, when pressed by Judge Almy to answer his questions.

"Mary was always following me around, wanting to get married," stoutly insisted Tony when it came his turn to testify. "I told her: 'I ain't got no money and can't get married. She came to my house at 2 o'clock Saturday morning and said: 'It's all right, Tony, I got the money now.' Then we went away for three days. She paid all the bills. Once I was going to pay fifty cents for something and she said: 'Take my money, Tony. I get $1.75 a day in wages.'

Officer Mallow recovered for the girl's father $178 in bills and $13.50 in gold. The watch and a ring were also returned to him. In Tony's pocket the officer found $100 in bills, but he says that he dreamtide from a Watertown bank and that it be his own money.

$25,000 LOOT ON RUSSIAN TRAIN

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 14.—Terrorists held up a train near Elizabethgrad in broad daylight to-day and looted the express car of $25,000. They then made their escape unharmed.

Armed men boarded the train at several stations along the line, concealing their weapons. At a favorable point near Elizabethgrad several of the terrorists forced their way into the engine, forcing the engineer to haul the train. At the same time other terrorists burst into the express car. The messenger was cowed, and the robbers rifled several packages. As the men disappeared they fired several volleys at the train to keep all the passengers inside.

The police are looking for his only accomplice, an eleven year-old youngster.

BEACH BLAZING SHIP; 450 IN DEATH PERIL

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—With the flames sweeping her decks while her crew fought vainly to overcome the blaze, the steamer Adirondack of the People's Line, bound from New York to Albany, raced four miles up the Hudson early to-day and finally was beached at Rosebo. Just as the passengers were getting thoroughly panic-stricken the steamer City of Hudson dashed alongside and took them off. Half an hour later the crew had extinguished the blaze, the steamer had been backed off the sand bank and proceeded to Albany for repairs.

Captain Woolsey declares no lives were lost, but the washing ashore at Newburg of a straw hat and some clothing led to a contrary report.

The steamer was passing West Point when the fire was discovered. While the crew fought the flames porters awakened the 450 passengers. They were told there was no immediate danger, but that all must go on deck. As the flames apparently began to gain on the firefighters the passengers, who at first had been calm, showed signs of nervousness. It was then decided to beach the steamer to prevent a panic.

LOSES HER ALL IN BANK WRECK

PITTSBURG, Aug. 14.—Penniless because of the failure of the Enterprise National Bank, which caused a political scandal in Western Pennsylvania, Mrs. Annie Holland of Allegheny, more than eighty-three years old and once wealthy, is living upon the charity of strangers.

When the bank failed Mrs. Holland had about $18,000 on deposit. The city authorities arranged to send the woman to the poorhouse to-day, but she pleaded so piteously and wept so bitterly that strangers have her in care and are making efforts to get her into some home for the aged.

FAMOUS CROOK RESCUED FROM THE GALLOWS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Aug. 14.—Governor Folk has given the notorious "Lord" Frederick Seymour Barrington, who was under sentence to die for the murder of his benefactor four years ago, a reprieve to life imprisonment. The case attracted world-wide attention at the time, as the bogus lord was one of the best known criminals in the United States.

Half a dozen years ago Barrington attracted the attention of the country when he posed in St. Louis as an English lord and married a beautiful Kansas City belle, only to be kicked from her brother's house when his identity was discovered a few months later. Following close on this episode, James McCann, a well-known St. Louis sporting man, became interested in Barrington when he was practically in the gutter, and put him on his feet once more.

McCann was mysteriously murdered at Boulevard just outside of St. Louis, during a feast with Barrington, who several days afterward returned to St. Louis, blood stained and disheveled, claiming that he and McCann had been assaulted. Before McCann's body was discovered several letters, owned to by Barrington, came to McCann's wife stating that McCann was happy and with women friends. It was believed that Barrington's motive was to cast suspicion against McCann and later marry Mrs. McCann, whom it is believed he loved.

According to police records, Barrington was known in England as George Barton, but had had a dozen aliases and had begun his criminal career at seventeen years of age. He has been arrested several times, always misrepresenting himself, once marrying for some married object, in variably abusing and eventually deserting his victim. He is of personable address, speaks several languages fluently, and apparently has a genius for lying, as during his lengthy trial he told hundreds of monumental and entirely unnecessary lies, that he later was obliged to acknowledge, which he always accomplished gracefully.

GOVERNOR OF R. I. IS AFTER RACE GAMBLING

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 14.—Governor Higgins has sent to President Henry M. Green of the North Smithfield Town Council a communication relative to illegal gambling in North Smithfield and asked his investigation.

On August 8 Governor Higgins received a letter from a man who signed his name "James Gibson," and his address was given as "P. O. Box 8, Providence." In this letter the writer complained that he had lost $50 betting on the races at Woonsocket and that in addition his pocket had been picked and $18 taken.

Governor Higgins wrote a letter to Chief of Police Boston of Woonsocket and the latter replied that there was no gambling, but that the place referred to was in North Smithfield.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—These are certainly trouble days for the World's Champion White Sox. Their latest hard luck is the injury to the star catcher, Billy Sullivan.

Sullivan's forefinger of his throwing hand has been badly split, and it will probably be two weeks before he is able to get back into the battle. As Sully was one of the biggest factors in the winning of the big series last season, he will undoubtedly be missed badly.

Morgan May Pitch.

Cy Morgan, who won his first whole game for the Bostons against the Sox last Saturday, may pitch again to-day, while "Doc" White will probably work for the home team.

The local fans are greatly surprised by the good showing of Cy's fish team. One fan said yesterday: "If the Sox lose the pennant this season they will have nobody to blame it on to but Jim McGuire and his Boston team."

The Bostons have now taken four straight from the home team. Six out of seven in all is traveling some and the Pilgrimers are entitled to all the credit in the world for doing such a stunt.

Manager Jim McGuire is no lucky as a clam at high tide. The Pilgrims are just the bone behind the Highlanders, and it looks like a cinch that they will land the second division before they get back to the Hub.

Bostons Won Yesterday.

The Bostons won yesterday, 7 to 4. Jesse Tannehill started to twirl for the visitors, and he stayed in the box for six innings when he was relieved by Pruiett.

Frank Smith pitched for the home talent, but the visitors didn't have much difficulty in hitting him.

It seemed good to have Tanny back on the firing line. He did well for him after the second, but he steadied, and pitched with his accustomed skill after that. McGuire hauling him out of the box so as not to tire him on his reappearance.

Jesse Tannehill's brother, Lee, was back on third for the Sox, having been absent since the opening of the season, owing to being spiked. Rohe was benched.

LONG RACE AT WONDERLAND

A six-day go-as-you-please pedestrian race, four hours every night, will be inaugurated at Wonderland, Revere Beach, beginning Monday, September 9. Entries will positively close on Labor Day, September 2.

Peter Golden, well known as a promoter of this popular phase of sporting contests, has charge of the arrangements, and all applications for entries should be addressed to him at Wonderland. The affair already received inquire one of the most exciting and well-fought contests of the kind ever attempted.

The fact that the battle will be at Wonderland is a guarantee that the races will be fought out on the square, as there is absolute faith will be kept with the public. Under such conditions and with Wonderland's fine track, it is expected that new records will be made.

SONOMA GIRL BADLY DRIVEN

POUGHKEEPSIE, Aug. 14.—Sonoma Girl is evidently not in the best of form just now, as yesterday at the meet here she was beaten by Watson in 2:08 and 2:08¼. She is a good mare for one, a wonderful mare when she is behaving herself. The Girl won in 2:06¾. Her downfall was partly because of the poor driving of her part owner, J. D. Springer.

SALLY VIII. LOST SECOND RACE

MARBLEHEAD, Aug. 14.—By winning yesterday's race from the Sally VIII., the defender of the Quincy Cup, held by the Corinthian Y. C. the Manchester II. in the Quincy Y. C. made the series even. The winner ran in from her rival in the last leg, finishing nearly twenty minutes to the good.

PRESIDENT DOVEY, of Boston Nationals.

GENERAL CHARLES H. TAYLOR, Vice-President of Boston Americans.

PITCHER CY YOUNG, of Boston Americans.

JOHN I. TAYLOR, President Boston Americans.

Here is the pitcher of whom President Dovey of the Boston Nationals said: "McGlynn is truly an iron man. He beat us last Saturday, and on Sunday pitched the first game on the double-header and defeated us again. He kicked like a steer because he couldn't twirl both games. It was the hottest day on record in St. Louis, and many players had to quit on account of the heat.

GERMANS WIN AGAIN AT KIEL

KIEL, Ger., Aug. 14.—Steered by Prince Henry of Prussia, the Tilly X won the second race for the Germans over the Americans in the sonder class races here for the Emperor's Cup. This makes the second defeat for the visitors. The Spokane I was second, 3m. 27s. behind the Tilly X, beating the third boat, the Wittelsbach, winner of Monday's race, by 1m. 2s. The Winnesse was fourth, the Chewink VIII was fifth and the Marblehead last.

YOUNG JOINS TEAM MONDAY

Pitcher Cy Young, the wonderful twirler of the Pilgrims, who remained in the Hub when his team went to Chicago Saturday night, owing to the illness of his wife, will leave Sunday to join the team in Detroit Monday. Cy has been taking morning workouts in order to keep himself in trim.

Lush, p.	Dorner, p.

It will be now or never with the Doves this afternoon when they line up with the Cardinals for the second game on the old sod. After losing six straight to the Mound City lads it's about time something broke in favor of the Doveites.

That the team is not as well organized as when the regulars, Brain and Bates, are in their positions is evident by the showing made in the absence of this pair makes a lot of difference.

The fact that the tailenders are playing better ball than at any time this season may be sufficient cause for their continued mix-up, but they certainly have on the streak and promise to make it hot for all the teams on the Eastern trip.

Tenney will run out one of his best bowings this afternoon, in the hope that he can has about the proper measurements to lead the way to victory for the Doves at last.

But McCloskey also has some star ards to draw from in Lush and Krueger, whose value has taken big jumps in major league ball.

That Young "Cy" Young has not caught his old-time form yet was clearly proven yesterday when he was the first Dove pitcher to face the Cardinals, and he was touched for four hits and had to be relieved at the end of the third inning.

In that time the Cardinals had gathered a homer a triple two doubles and a couple of singles which counted for six runs. Then Pfeffer took up the job and was going smoothly till the ninth, when there was another racket by the Westerners and four singles and a triple got them a trio of runs.

One of McCloskey's cub pitchers, Fromme, was on the slab and he looked good enough when the Doves got four runs in the first, but he seemed hard for the Hub batters after that, as they could barely touch him.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

The brakes are due for that stump.

President Dovey feels the continued defeats worse than any of the fans.

A rooter feeling the heat walked on the field and was going to annihilate Umpire Johnstone, but a copper spied him when he was in the diamond and guided him toward the exit.

President Taylor of the Americans, Colonel Taylor and Cy Young watched the sport from the stand.

Bates connected for a terrific wallop in the first when the bases were filled, clearing the sacks. He might have scored, too, but was held on third.

Bates had to give way to Flaherty, as he is still under the weather and Randall went over to right and Pat to left.

The way that Joe Byrne captures difficult flies back of the baseline shows his mettle.

A home run and a triple shows pretty conclusively that McCloskey found a jewel when he picked up that Pole, Konetchey, the big first baseman.

* * *

Sweeney showed brilliancy on third base, barring the wild throw he made in the final inning. He had to shoot the ball quick, but never took any aim.

BIG MILLION DOLLAR GOLF COURSE NEARLY COMPLETED

Charles B. Macdonald's dream of an ideal golf course is rapidly becoming a reality for down among the sand dunes near Shinnecock Hills great progress has been made during the past Summer on this million-aire's retreat. It is estimated that the course and club-house will cost $1,000,000.

In selecting the land for this unusual undertaking Macdonald could hardly have hit upon a spot more suited by nature for just such a purpose. But even before he had definitely determined upon the site he went abroad and inspected many of the famous holes on the "classic" links of Scotland and England. Born in Scotland and having learned the game at old St. Andrews, Macdonald was well qualified to bear the brunt of the undertaking.

But he was not content to depend solely upon his own judgment. Foreign golfers were consulted, and ere long Macdonald had a trunkful of maps describing the best holes on scores of courses in a nutshell, therefore, the ideal course when completed, will be simply a reproduction of the best to be found abroad, but also original, as the plans are to be attempted that were never thought of before.

Charles Blair Macdonald in his work were H. J. Whigham, another Scot and also an ex-champion, and Walter Travis, of Garden City, who for years stood at the head of golf in this country.

Although the new eighteen-hole circuit will undoubtedly attract international attention does not intend to have it become exclusive.

M'LEAN TO RACE THREE RIDERS IN RELAYS

Hugh MacLean, the champion bike rider, has a big contract on his hands next Saturday night at the Revere track when he will race three men in a twenty-five mile event. He covers the entire distance, while Elmer Collins, Patsy Logan and George Wiley will ride in relays.

Collins is as fast as any man on the track for short distances and should win over MacLean if Logan and Wiley can hold the champion when they face him.

This will be a sensational race with MacLean riding for all he is worth to beat Logan's fast field.

Another feature is the unlimited pursuit race between Jimmy Moran and Joe Fogler, the six-day star. The last time they met it took thirteen miles for the latter to topple and Moran won, as Fogler punctured his tire when he had Moran beaten.

The amateurs will race for the first time since they were suspended riding in a five-mile open race, and a big bunch of them will be entered.

Cycle polo matches are to be staged that will be the best of the season.

KEELER SMOKES TO BAT WELL

"Wee" Willie Keeler began to smoke before he began to slave.

Contrary to the advice given by most of his fellow-athletes, he believes that the former habit, if anything, assists his swatting eye.

He never tries to stop smoking during the baseball season, as many players do. He contends that fighting the habit makes one nervous.

He does not advocate anything for anybody except myself," says Keeler. "But it is my opinion that smoking is not injurious to the batting eye of a player provided the smoke is not inhaled, if puffed into the lungs, however, it is deadly."

NEXT SPEEDWAY RACES SEPT. 7

There will be no matinees of the Dorchester Driving Club at Franklin Field on Labor Day as previously announced. This has been decided upon by the racing committees through so many of the club members taking their horses away to the half-mile tracks to race for money.

On Labor Day the Dorchesters meet the Lynn Driving Club in an intercity matinee at Combination Park. Committees from both organizations are now busily matching the trotters and pacers from each of the clubs. It is expected that the meeting will prove equally as interesting as the one held last Bunker Hill Day.

"CORBETT" TO MEET TERRY

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—One of the features of the stag at the Crown Athletic Club at the Clermont Avenue Rink in Brooklyn to-morrow night, will be a three-round bout between Willie Fitzgerald and Tim Russell. This star bout promises to be one of the liveliest (as Jerry Cohan has arranged in some time. The members of the Crown C. will see Willie Fitzgerald will probably see plenty of it in this six-round bout.

Russell has just been matched to fight Indian Joe Gregg fifteen rounds at Fortia, Long Island, on Labor Day.

WOLCOTTS' GOOD RECORD.

The Wolcotts of Dorchester, the thirteen-fourteen year-old champions of the State, will clash to-morrow afternoon at the American League grounds with the House of Angel Guardian team of Roxbury for the State's championship. The Wolcotts thus far have not been defeated, winning twenty-four games this season.

Three races were on the program, but the feature was the trial of the champion pacer, Dan Patch, against time. The time was 1:56¾, with a strong current and wind shield. CANADA AND FOREIGN COUNTRIES ADD ONE REGULAR RATE

1908 CARS IN DEMAND AT PRESENT

BY J. C. KERRISON.

There seems to be a general demand up and down the line for the 1908 cars. The great majority of those who are now looking for motor vehicles seem to have their eyes focused on the model of next year, and nothing but that will suit them. Of course they are many who are content to purchase this year's model feeling that it has already proved successful and practical, and they are perfectly willing to permit others to take chances of purchasing cars of the later design. So far as can be learned at this time the car of 1908 will not differ materially from that of the present year. In matter of detail also is there been any great change, and even in that respect it has been no strong or radical departure from the car of the present day. Of course the manner of six cylinder cars on the market will at great increase, many of the leading makers having decided on pairs of that character on the market. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the gradual decreasing the length of the wheel base has reached its limit, and that 1908 will not see cars having a much longer wheel base than those of 1907. The only 1908 cars now in this city are about an inch shorter in wheel base than were their predecessors of this year.

Manager Hinchcliffe, of the local branch of the Wheeler-Schebler Company, starts to-day for a business trip West. He goes to the factory at Cleveland, and will there look over the 1908 product and make arrangements for an early delivery of the same to his customers in this section.

* * *

Manager V. A. Charles of the Rambler Company starts for Kenosha on Saturday. He goes to attend a conference of all Rambler branch men to look into the new model and incidentally do what he can towards getting an early shipment for Boston.

A. J. Murdock of Cincinnati is now touring the White Mountains in a Winton Model M. He touched through Boston and then started for the mountain districts.

The Cleveland Automobile Club will hold a series of contests shortly, all of which will take place during the latter part of August. There will be a sealed bonnet contest for gasoline and steam machines, with its test for commercial vehicles and an efficiency trial for touring cars. Morgan R. Bowler will be in charge and data regarding the various contests may be obtained by addressing him at the club. It is proposed to make a number of these trials and numerous promises of entries have been received from all parts of the country.

Have You Tried Browne's Cow Problem? Try It Today and Send in Solutions

Over what area did Browne's cow graze?

Here's a chance to do a little more brain work. The apparently simple little question has puzzled hundreds and bids fair to become as famous as the "How Old Is Ann" problem.

If you have not tried it, do it to-day. Get out your paper and pencil and reckon up. Here is the question:

A cow is tied to the corner of a barn twenty-five feet square. The rope one hundred feet long. Over how much ground will it be possible for her to graze?

The answers are still piling in and there is a chance for you to get in and win out. It's a brainstormer, but it's no harm to try.

Following are some of the answers:

Cambridge Man's Answer.

Problem Editor—I take the problem to mean how much ground can be included in the different circles of the rope.

A circle 100 ft. radius.....29,502.000
A circle 125 ft. radius.....
The two fractional circles of 75 ft. radius, equalling circle of 90.75 feet, radius.....7,408.125

Minus area of barn.....36,945.125
.....30,375.000

M. SHORT.

Gauntries.

All Figured Out.

Problem Editor—Assuming 22 as a ratio of diameter to circumference of circle, then Browne's cow grazed over an area of 31,400 sq. ft., whose diameter is 200 ft., that is, half the area of a circle whose diameter is 150 ft. Yes; 23,571 plus 8,33⅓, or total 32,404⅓ square ft.

A Little Suggestion.

Problem Editor—That cow problem is all right. Our friend may have worked it out correctly, but I think Mr. Eddington miscalculated and put the sod over about a few feet, more or less. Now, everything being favorable to the old cow, she is entitled to 30,502.00 feet to graze on. Please send to Browne's cow a few bales of hay.

More Room for Bossy.

Problem Editor: Here is my answer to your famous cow question. Assuming the outside of the barn Browne's cow can cover ¾ of a circle with a radius of 100 feet. She can also cover ¼ of a circle 175 feet radius on one side and 1-8 on the other, equal to three-quarters of a circle, leaves two similar triangles equal to 1,061.25 square feet. Total area, 30,502.50 plus 1,061.26 equal 31,563.7 square feet.

All Up Around 30,000.

Problem Editor:

My solution of the Browne cow problem is as follows: The area over which the cow can graze equals the area of ¾ of a circle 100 ft. radius, plus the area of 2-8 of a circle 150 ft. diam., plus 2-8 of a circle 175 feet radius, minus the area of a circle 25 feet radius, equals 30,502.5 sq. ft.

U. S. Navy Takes Up Problem.

Problem Editor—The surface upon which it is possible for the cow to graze could be found as follows: Area of circle of radius 100 ft., 31,400 sq. ft. To find the area of the common segment of circle of radius 150 ft., 22,875 sq. ft. Area of circle of radius 25 ft., 1,962.5 sq. ft. The area of the segment of circle of radius 25 ft. is the difference between the area of the sector of circle of radius 25 ft. and the area of the right-angled triangle, the legs of which are 25 ft. and 12½ ft. Area of sector, 2,453.125 sq. ft. Area of triangle, 156.25 sq. ft. Area of segment, 2,296.875 sq. ft. Total area, 26,934.375 sq. ft.

U. S. N. Yes.

Little Girl's Way of Figuring.

Problem Editor—I believe that Mr. Browne's cow can be a space of 31,400 sq. ft. plus 1,125 sq. ft., area of shed, leaving 30,791 sq. ft., to graze on. As the cow is tied to the shed she could occupied a space of 625 sq. ft. If there is room for her to graze on 30,791 sq. ft. she could graze on 31,416 sq. ft. Deducting 625 sq. ft. occupied by sq. diameter makes it 400 sq. ft. multiplied by diameter makes it 400 sq. ft. multiplied by 31, makes 625 sq. ft., leaves it 30,791 sq. ft. for Boss to graze on.

Problem Editor:

If the cow kept moving all the time in different directions it would be impossible to figure out how much ground she can graze over. It is plain to see, whether it is correct or not, that she is not grazing, simply lying down, so consequently the grass is 4½ feet long.

Rope or Chain.

Problem Editor—If Browne's cow was tied to the corner of a barn 25 feet square, I mean tied securely, she could not move an inch no matter how long the rope was, unless the rope was a chain, and a chain, by the distance covered would be good proof on how much stretch there was to the rope and the nature of the chain.

Speaking of Large Fines---

How Does THIS Fine Impress You?

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal-Examiner

The Standard Oil Trust was fined twenty-nine millions. It hasn't paid the fine, and, as we remarked before, it WON'T pay it.

If you ask WHY it won't pay it, the answer is simple. The Standard Oil is going to take this fine and drag it through all the courts in sight, slowly and deliberately. SOMEWHERE ON THE ROAD A WEAK SPOT WILL BE FOUND. That fine won't be paid at least unless the people shall keep their minds on the matter, and that is the most unlikely of all things.

The twenty-nine-million-dollar fine has fired the imagination of proud America. We have the biggest rivers, the biggest waterfall, the biggest fortunes, the biggest farce in the way of government by the people, for it is really governed by Trusts; and now we have THE BIGGEST FINE ON RECORD.

But is that fine of twenty-nine million dollars inflicted on the Standard Oil so VERY great?

You know what the fine amounts to—less than THREE PER CENT. of Mr. Rockefeller's own individual fortune.

It amounts to less than one-twentieth part of the net cash that the Standard Oil has taken out of the people in the last few years.

If you want to hear about a really BIG fine, a fine that was of ridiculous size, and out of all proportion, just read about Mr. F. W. Bates, of Quincy, Illinois.

Mr. Bates had various things. He had an appetite, but that would not have made him commit a crime.

He liked money like any Standard Oil magnate, but that would not have driven him to crime. He had a sick young wife, and THAT did make a criminal of him.

Blind to all the lessons of Trust management, Mr. Bates stole twenty cents' worth of milk and took it home to his wife, who drank it.

They caught him and arrested him.

And they fined him $12.90.

Now that is what you can really CALL a big fine.

When you take a man who has a sick wife, and less than nothing in the way of property, and when you fine him twelve hundred and ninety cents for taking twenty cents, you are really showing what majestic law can do when it gets excited.

The Standard Oil was fined less than five per cent. of its recent profits.

Bates, of Quincy, Illinois, was fined twelve hundred and ninety times as much money as he had—and more, too, for he didn't even have a cent.

Whether Bates will pay his fine or not, we don't know, but we dare say he will pay it before the Standard Oil pays ITS fine.

When the judge who fined him ten dollars and the costs, amounting to two dollars and ninety cents, heard Bates's story, he was inclined to be lenient. It seemed that Bates and his sick wife were expecting an important family arrival, and the doctor had said that the anaemic wife must have fresh milk.

Bates built a comical sort of bicycle out of old odds and ends that boys had given him. He tried to sell it. But he couldn't get anything for it. It was good, however, to ride on for a little while. He rode to the prosperous quarter, and saw twenty cents' worth of milk standing in an areaway.

The judge gave him until September 16 to raise the money and pay the fine, which was very kind; he MIGHT have sent him to jail.

This will seem comical some day, when really intelligent men of the future read our history.

We fine one man less than three per cent. of what he has, and we all understand that he won't pay it—although the crimes of his corporation have been serious, a drain upon every pocket in the land.

And every day we take thousands of men and fine them more than the total amount of their possessions, and lock them up promptly if they don't pay.

All this must mean complicated bookkeeping for the Angel Gabriel.

Good Bargains for Wise Women

This Is "Dull Season." The Ship of Commerce Is in the Doldrums. Get Aboard

Copyright, 1907, by American Journal-Examiner

There are many merchants wondering now how they can get rid of the things left over before the season of Autumn selling shall commence.

There are bargains in the stores, and wise women can combine profit and amusement by traveling around the stores at this time.

Go in the morning, when it is cool. Read beforehand in this newspaper what the merchants offer in their regular advertisemnts, then turn to the Home Magazine Page and read the "Best Bargains" which are carefully selected for you daily by an expert shopper, then do your selecting.

The foolish man jokes about the bargain counter. The wiser women crowd AROUND the bargain counter.

This is the season when bargains are ripest, because merchants have GOT to sell. They need the room. Their profit has been made on goods sold at full prices earlier in the season, and in many cases they are actually only too glad to take now less than they paid for the merchandise.

It is idiocy to suppose that the bargain counter represents the result of poorly paid work, or that it represents inferior goods.

The bargain counter represents sometimes the effort of one merchant to eclipse another. Advertising costs a great deal and some merchants put part of their advertising allowance into selling below cost. The woman who gets the bargain advertises the store.

Sometimes—at this season especially—the bargain counter represents mistakes of "buyers" for the big stores. They overdid the buying, took in more than the public could absorb—and now the counters must be cleared to make room for other things.

Some merchants just now make a specialty of furniture. They are all paying rent—all paying wages—in good times as in bad, and they must do something to keep money coming in.

There are real chances now—the wise woman will seize them, instead of waiting until the time when everybody tries to buy at once.

The Cranky Crab

By Wex Jones

ONCE there lived a little crab,
a grouchy little cuss,
Who was always beefing, kicking, growling and complaining;
Over everything that happened he'd kick up an awful fuss,
From an earthquake to a nipper that was paining.
He'd scuttle o'er the sand in his sulky,
sidelong way,
Peering all around him for a thing
to vent his spite on,
And nothing pleased him more than,
that sultry Summer day
He discovered in the water something soft and new to bite on.
His wicked eyes beheld the pinkest little toe
That ever went a-paddling in the ocean,
And the cranky, cruel crab nipped and,
wouldn't let it go
Till its owner raised a harrowing commotion.
After that the crab with a grouch
would seek the beach
And keep half the kids in terror of his pinches;
It relieved him much to witness, while safely out of reach,
His victims' jumps and hops and kicks and flinches.
But one day a victim turned and he tracked the cranky crab,
Which had nipped his harmless toe
to ease its feelings;
And he cracked the sneaking biter on a handy driftwood slab,
And so ended all his crabler's vicious dealings.

SO shake the awful grouch, when you feel it glum and grum.
For all your better impulses it
smothers;
But if you cannot dodge it, and it's simply got to come,
For goodness' sake don't visit it on others!

Second in the List of Her Desirable Qualities in a Wife She Names Neatness and Good Order

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

AFTER the composite qualities of love and cheerfulness, next in value comes order.

This is said by the poet to be heaven's first law. But having sojourned in homes where order reigned supreme, without love or cheerfulness, I would rather make my abode in Pandora's box, with the first named qualities, than in such a home.

A neat and orderly woman, when she is affectionate and optimistic, becomes as near the earthly angel as the race can produce.

She must, however, be tolerant and patient with those who are not orderly and avoid making her virtue of order a vice by the extremity to which she carries it into execution.

It is a great joy to live with a companion who has a place for everything, and everything in its place, unless the habit has become a mania, driving away all tender and considerate qualities.

An Extreme Case

THERE was a neat and orderly woman once upon a time who made her children and friends, and guests even, dread their approach to her door, because she followed them with a broom and rag and removed the dust of their footsteps as fast as they trod across her polished floor; and before her callers departed she straightened the furniture and set things in order.

Of course this woman was a widow. Her husband died young.

But many a sweet, adorable wife makes discord for herself and discontent for her family by disorderly habits.

An untidy house usually finds its accompaniment in an untidy woman.

Careless, hurried morning toilets, buttons and hooks missing, hair disarranged, torn gloves and veils, result from lack of order.

The loveliest, most affectionate and cheerful of women can make irritation and ill temper in the house by never being able to find simple household articles when they are wanted at a moment's notice.

Precious Moments Wasted

I HAVE seen an otherwise admirable wife cause her husband to miss trolleys and trains and boats by her continual misplacement and perpetual hunt for the lorgnette, upon which she relies for eyesight. This good lady knows she cannot read without this article, and she never leaves her door without it, yet it seems absolutely impossible for her to put it in the same place twice or to find it ten minutes before she starts anywhere.

She knows her fault and bemoans it, yet seems to lack the needed strength of character to overcome it.

She spends precious moments every day hunting for objects which she has misplaced, and the serenity of the house is disturbed by her constant overhauling of bureau drawers and tables and dressers, seeking what she cannot find.

Therefore, it seems to me, the second important quality in a wife is order.

Early Training

EVERY mother should begin in early childhood to teach her little girl to put things away in their proper places and to be systematic and neat.

It is easily taught if begun early.

It is very difficult to learn after the disorderly habit is formed. The kindergartens do wonders with children in this respect.

If parents would continue the training afterward, many a home would be benefited.
